The Senate approved a $2.7 billion foreign aid authorization today and sent the bill to the House for a conference with House negotiators for adjusting differences. The vote was 63-17.

The House passed an aid authorization bill totaling $2.7 billion on Aug. 23. If the conference committee follows past practice, a compromise figure of about $3.6 billion is likely.

The Senate measure, voted after three weeks of testimony and a subcommittee report, authorizes $900 million less than was endorsed by the Foreign Relations Committee and $800 million less than President Kennedy had asked.

Complaint by Senator J. W. Fulbright, Democrat of Arkansas, on the Foreign Relations Committee, said before the Senate.

The bill has been amended to allow the administration to suspend the aid.

But there was even more criticism on the immediate situation that will approve the money for foreign aid and the ceiling authorized to the Representative Otto E. Bremer, Democrat of Louisiana, who said that the House will recommend no more than $2.7 billion for the year, ending here.

In the Senate, Fulbright challenged repeated claims of the program's cost. He said it is possible to cut the program's cost by $1 billion.

The last question on the passage of the bill was whether it was removed from the administration agreed to suspend underwriting by the Export-Import Bank of wheat and grain shipments to the Soviet Union and the rest of the world.
