Times Berald

MARCH ى •

Phone 223-6000

Financial

Crossword Editorials D12 B 7 A26 D 8

Obituaries Sports Style TV-Radio Gardens Metro

88 Pages
4 Sections

Classified Amusements B 9 Classified C13

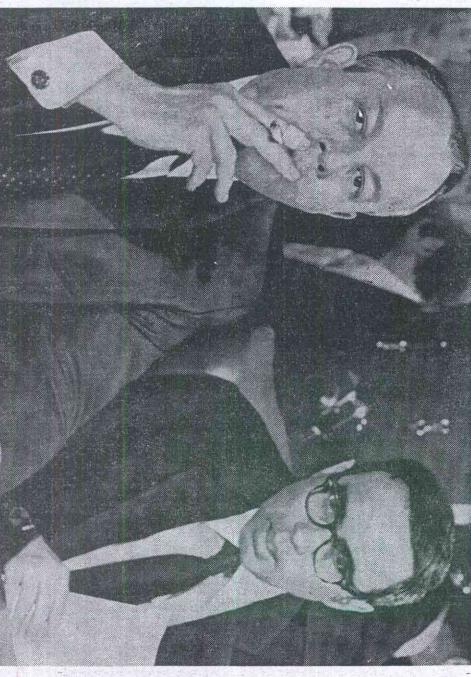

Comics

FRIDAY, 1972

Circulation 223-6100 Classified 223-6200

15c Beyond Washington, Maryland and Virginia

10c

Was Improper

Washington Post Staff Writer

By Sanford J. Ungar

Denies Role

Kleindiens

United Press International

ITT. antitrust action against graph Corp. about pending tional Telephone and Teledirector of the Internameetings last year with a ate committee his five terday described to a Sen-Richard G. Kleindienst yes-He said the meetings were Acting Attorney General

Acting Attorney General Richard Kleindienst and ITT's Felix Rohatyn before the Senate Judiciary Committee. sentative of ITT, complained neighbors, a Washington reprearranged after one of his to him at a springtime party that the antitrust litigation could have disastrous economic effects on the company and the nation.

But Kleindienst, whose nomination as Attorney General is pending before the Senate, steadfastly denied that he exerted any pressure to obtain a favorable settlement of the case for ITT.

He also insisted, during a day-long hearing, that he had no knowledge at the time of the plans of an ITT subsidiary to donate $400,000 to the committee planning this summer's Republican National Convention in San Diego.

Kleindienst's version of events was supported by U.S. District Court Judge Richard W. McLaren, former head of the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department, and Felix G. Rohatyn, the ITT director with whom Kleindienst discussed the case.

The testimony and questioning of the three witnesses took so long yesterday that the Senate Judiciary Committee never had time to hear from the man who first leveled charges of impropriety against Kleindienst, syndicated col-umnist Jack Anderson.

Anderson- is scheduled to testify when the special hearing resumes today, as is former Attorney General John N. Mitchell and W. R. Merriam, the ITT vice president in charge of the conglomerate's Washington office.

A subpoena has been issued for Dita D. Beard, a lobbyist for ITT and the author of a controversial memorandum published by Anderson linking the antitrust settlement to the alleged $400,000 contribution.

But Mrs. Beard could not be found, and Committee Chairman James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) said last night that he had asked the FBI to help locate her.

See KLEINDIENST, A4, Col. 6

Arlington, had been ordered on the stockmarket." out of town by ITT officials. Justice Department officials were unanimous in their demand that she appear. "I'd sure like to have that gal up here to be examined under oath," McLaren said.

Kleindienst acknowledged under oath yesterday, when pressed by Sen. Birch Bayh (D-Ind.) that "I set in motion a series of eyents by which Mr. McLaren became persuaded meeting, Kleindienst testified. ... that he ought to come off his position." which was that ITT must divest itself of the recently acquired Hartford Fire Insurance Co.

This is how Kleindienst described the "series of events":

At a neighborhood party in suburban McLean, Va., last Antitrust Division in another clarification of the settlement spring, he said, John Ryan, controversial case involving proposals or complaining that corporate deputy director of the Ling-Temco-Vaught con- the terms were too harsh on ITT here, approached Klein-glomerate. Both evaluations ITT. dienst and "raised the quess supported ITT, McLaren "It ITT here, approached Kleintion of whether I would be added. available to discuss economic aspects" of the ITT antitrust action.

Although Kleindienst said his memory of the conversation was vague, he testified that he told Ryan he "would be available" for such talks.

Shortly before April 20, Kleindienst received a call from Rohatyn and they set up an appointment for that date.

Rohatyn stressed in advance, Kleindienst said, that "he was not a lawyer and had no political credentials." In fact, the then deputy attorney general subsequently learned that Rohatyn, a New York investment banker, was on the finance committee of Democratic presidential aspirant Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine.

At the April 20 meeting, Rohatyn explained to Kleindienst that if the Justice Department were to prevail in three antitrust cases pending against the $6.7 billion conglomerate, "drastic economic consequences would accrue," the Cabinet nominee said.

The potential consequences described by Rohatyn were a itt, home builders. $1 billion loss to ITT stock-

KLEINDIENST, From A1 perform overseas contracts and a subsequent "unfavorable effect on the balance of director to have ITT lawyers that Mrs. Beard, a resident of payments" and "repercussions

At Rohatyn's suggestion, Kleindienst said, he urged McLaren to call a meeting nine days later during which the director and other ITT representatives explained their case of "financial hardship" to Justice and Treasury Department officials.

"My own recollection is that I sat there and said nothing lier by McLaren. myself" during the April 29

After that meeting, Mc-Laren testified, he asked for an evaluation of ITT's claims representatives and Richard J. and July 15. Ramsden, a New York investment banker who had pre- tyn was checking on the progviously been consulted by the ress of the case, asking for (McLaren later said that he Rohatyn testified. could not remember, but he thought Ramsden had been Department either by the to inform McLaren of the last.

Treasury Department or two meeting with the ITT

(A Treasury Department spokesman confirmed last Cabinet nominee testified, night that the two Treasury representatives attended the April 29 meeting "basically to Mass.), Kleindienst said Rohaanswer questions" and "stated orally" that same day that "there was merit" in ITT's po- ment. sition on the international issues.

(The Treasury spokesman said, however, that no formal report on the ITT case was ever requested from or filed by that department.)

McLaren and his aides subsequently developed a settlement proposal which was submitted to Kleindienst for his approval on June 17. It permitted ITT to retain the Hart-holders, a $4-5 billion tax prob-lem and liquidity loss, result-tified, they jointly called Ro-The Washington Post regrets ing in an inability of ITT to hatyn in New York from the error.

director to have ITT lawyers contact McLaren about final negotiations, if interested.

Kleindienst supervised the ITT case after Mitchell withdrew from it because his law firm had substantial dealings with the conglomerate.

On July 31, a Saturday, the ITT settlement was announced, essentially along the lines proposed six weeks ear-

Kleindienst and Rohatyn testified that they held three other private meetings while the ITT case was under consideration by the Justice Deby the Treasury Department partment-on May 10, June 29

Each time, they said, Roha-

"It began to look like dismemberment of the company,"

Kleindienst said that he gave Rohatyn no encouragerecommended to the Justice ment and did not even bother Treasury Department or two meeting with the ITT White House aide Peter Flanidirector I told him (Rohatyn) that I would not inject myself into the negotiations," the > Under initial questioning by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (Dtyn simply telephoned and asked for the first appoint-

> During a private conference at the witness table, however, Rohatyn reminded Kleindienst that the arrangement originally resulted from the deputy attorney general's talk with Ryan at the neighborhood party.

Correction

Two International Telephone and Telegraph Corp. offord Fire Insurance Co., but ficials were incorrectly identirequired divestiture of several fied in photographs on Page other subsidaries, including A4 of The Washington Post Avis Rent-A-Car and ITT Lev- March 2. Felix Rohatyn, a director, was inadvertently On the morning of June 17, transposed with ITT chairman

Contradictions Cited in ITT Case

By Jack Anderson

The Justice Department and International Telephone and over the suspicious, sudden vention in San Diego. settlement of a landmark antitrust suit against ITT.

In earlier columns, we dis-Republican convention in San convention in San Diego.

eral John Mitchell at a Ken-you." tucky dinner party.

ing us back with a terse state- legal counsel was authorized ment from Mitchell.

The statement says the At- the statement said. torney General "was not in-year, California Lt. Gov. Ed the economic side" by ITT look at the federal prison re-Gillenwaters, met with Mitch-Telegraph are now trying to ell in his Washington office to lie their way out of a scandal discuss efforts to hold the con-

Mitchell Misleads

We could not reach Reinclosed a remarkable ITT memo ecke, But Gillenwaters told us indicating the Justice Depart- he and Reinecke personally insettlement in exchange for offered to put up as much as cash support of the upcoming $400,000 to support a GOP

"He liked the idea of (hav-The author of the memo, ing the convention in) San Di-ITT lobbyist Dita Beard, told ego," Gillenwaters said of us she arranged the settle- Mitchell. "He didn't need any ment herself in a private con- persuading. He said, 'If you anti-trust division)," the Klein- no-fault proposal . . . versation with Attorney Gen- can do it, more power to

ITT also issued a statement Mitchell refused to talk to on the matter which insisted us. A spokesman, John Hush- that only its lawyers were auen, urged us to withhold our thorized to deal with the Jusstory until he could "get our tice Department on the antiducks in a row." He then trust cases. "Neither Mrs. waited three days before call- Beard nor anyone else except to carry on such negotiations,"

This is also false. Felix Rovolved in any way with the hatyn, an investment banker has been named to replace trust staff in the ITT case.

dienst letter said.

Obviously, if Kleindienst were holding secret talks with Rohatyn on the case, it could not have been "handled" and negotiated "exclusively" by McLaren and ITT's lawyers.

Under the Dome

raph" said he was specifically au-Penitentiaries Subcommittee, cycle. This is false. In mid-May last thorized to "make the case on will soon be taking a hard Reinecke and an aide, Edgar President Harold S. Geneen. habilitation programs. Cook Rohatyn's acknowledgment hopes to kick off two days of also puts the lie to an earlier hearings this April with testistatement by Kleindienst, who mony by James Hoffa . . .

As a member of the power-Mitchell as Attorney General. ful Senate Commerce Commit-On December 13, Kleindienst tee, Indiana Democrat Vance wrote to Democratic National Hartke will have a lot to say Chairman Larry O'Brien to about whether the national nodeny that high-level political fault automobile insurance bill pressure had been exerted on ever reaches the Senate floor. ment granted the favorable formed Mitchell that ITT had the Justice Department's anti-His opinion may be colored somewhat by the fact that he "The settlement between is a full-fledges, dues-paying the Department of Justice and ($175 per year) "sustaining ITT was handled and nego-member" of the American tiated exclusively by Assistant Trial Lawyers Association -Attorney General Richard W. the lawyers' group which is McLaren (then head of the lobbying mightily to kill the

The black-owned Afro-American newspaper appeared on the newsstand in a Senate dining room recently and stayed there exactly one day before irate Senate Restaurants Manager Joseph Diamond banned it." . . . Doug Toms, Federal highway safety director, may Sen. Jennings Randolph, the leave his job to take a crack West Virginia Democrat who at politics in Washington state. fought for the eighteen-year- Toms was bitterly disappointold vote for 30 years, recently ed when he couldn't get Dewent home to personally es- troit to put airbags in all pas-Republican National Commit- and director of ITT, told us he cort a college student to the senger cars by the 1974 modtee convention negotiations held a series of about a half- voter registration desk. The els. He recuperated from the and had no knowledge of any-dozen secret meetings during unawed young lady registered setback with a breezy 21-day one from the committee or the merger negotiations with Republican . . . Sen. Marlow junket to Japan to visit auto elsewhere dealing with Inter-Deputy Attorney General Cook (R-Ky.), ranking minor-plants and see whether Honda national Telephone and Tele-Richard Kleindienst. Rohatyn ity member of the Senate can develop a safer motor-

Bell-McClure Syndicate

Poster .

"What do you think you were doing there," Sen. Hart of Michigan wanted to know, "giving an economics course?" "No sir," the poor little conglomerator answered in deference, "I was trying to make a hardship case."

Getting ITT Done

A Commentary By Nicholas von Hoffman

With all the press, Justice Department people, and International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation flunkies, the waiting public didn't get into the Senat-Judiciary Committee's imperial art deco hearing room Nor would they get to see it on TV because chairman James O. Eastland doesn't like a lot of cameras around

They wouldn't get to hear Attorney General-designate Richard Kleindienst deny columnist Jack Anderson's ac cusation that the administration had taken what would amount to a $400,000 bribe to go easy on ITT in three antitrust suits. Since no individual has been accused or pocketing the money, but only the Republican Party, the moment lacked that yummy feeling that people get when they think that a politician is going to be hauled off to jail. Actually, Anderson's charge is worse because it suggests not individual, but institutional corruption.

There was, however, the distant possibility that the hearings might cause the Senate to think twice about confirming Kleindienst, the old Goldwaterite anti-civil libertarian with the Assyrian, wrap-around bull's eyes. Just the barest of a chance of stopping him because even the liberals who consider Kleindienst the guy who did his all to keep blacks from voting back home in Arizona say they're going to vote for him. Still, now there is a chance and that prompted I. F. Stone to look at the meaty-fleshy fellow as he took his seat in the witness chair and whisper, "We've been saved, not by the bell but by the smell."

There was the odor of something in the room, maybe faith and sanctity, for to believe what Kleindienst told the committee would have been something of a religious exercise. According to him he had nothing to do with the case that would have separated the Hartford Fire Insurance Company from the ITT conglomerate octupus. It was a lucky stroke that brought Felix Rohatyn, the stock-broking member of ITT's board to his office, not to arrange a deal, but to explain the dreadful economic consequences of successfully prosecuting the case.

Why, Kliendienst, who makes up in the self-confidence of the powerful what he may lack in plausibility, said, he'd never met a soul from ITT before that date, had no interest in the company . . . oh, no, that wasn't quite true, he did know this chap Ryan who does something for the company, sees him at neighborhood Christmas parties, block club meetings, and yes, under questioning from Teddy Kennedy, Ryan did say something about meeting with somebody at the conglomerate, but that was the last of it, he had no idea that it would be this amiable Mr. Rohatyn or that it would turn out so that "Mr. Rohatyn and I had a very good social relationship through all this."

Mr. Rohatyn, a little, narrow-tied man who doesn't look like a million dollars, was there by the Assyrian Bull's side to verify all this. "Every meeting was on the record," he assured everybody, although they met alone and there are no extant notes. They made no deals, negotiated nothing. "What did you think you were doing there," Sen. Hart of Michigan wanted to know, "giving an economics course?"

"No, sir," the poor little conglomerator answered in deference. "I was trying to make a hardship case."

Ultimately, he did. It took a lot of meetings. ITT had to hire two fancy economists from Columbia University and the Wharton School of Finance to make it. And the Justice Department had to hire a somewhat mysterious outside financial expert with unknown credentials who may or may not have been recommended by the White House to understand how it would be a hardship if ITT were forced to divest itself of the $2-billion insurance company.

At length the experts made the hardship case by explaining what they call the "ripple effect," the possibility of untoward consequence on the New York Stock Exchange and possible injury to our balance of trade, and got the Justice Department to agree that ITT. with assets of close to $7 billion, shouldn't have to give up Hartford. As soon as the decision was reached, Kleindienst called the anemic little financier and told him the good news. You'd do as much for somebody with whom you had "a very good social relationship."

So they denied everything, but in denying all they confessed all. For suppose that Anderson's charges are completely untrue, they've already told too much in trying to refute them. Here you see it, Mr. Rohatyn can just drop in on the Deputy Attorney General and explain everything. Could Ralph Nader, who sued to prevent the ITT-Hartford merger? He might be able to demonstrate a different ripple effect. Here we see the fancypants Washington law firms like Covington and Burling at work; here we see the use of outside professionals paid to prove in their prestigious jargon what their bosses want proven.

And that's all legal. That, they're proud to admit.

That's the right way to get things done.

ITT Generosity Long-Standing And Bipartisan

By Morton Mintz Washington Post Staff Writer

International Telephone and Telegraph Co. has been kind to Democrats, too, even though it is getting some bad publicity at the moment for allegedly making an unusually generous offer to help finance the Republican National Convention so as to get leverage on the Justice Department for a favorable ruling on a merger case.

One example of ITT's spirit of bipartisanship—a spirit shared, it should be noted, by many large corporations, banks, labor unions and trade associations-dates back to

The president of ITT, then as now, was Harold S. (Hal) Geneen. He and two former ITT vice presidents, J. T. Naylor and William Marx, figure prominently in the story of ITT's bipartisan generosity.

Naylor, in a sworn affidavit filed with the Senate Rules Committee and the Justice Department, said that Marx told him in October, 1960, that ITT wanted "to 'butter' both sides so we'll be in a good position whoever wins."

Naylor said Marx also told him, "Hal and the board have a program that is very important to political protection and business development. Hal has given me a selected list of top executives to contribute to the election campaign. You are down for $1,200.

"This can be financed for you by the company if necessary . . . You will be expected to recover the amount by covering it up in your traveling expense account."

(The Corrupt Practices Act of 1925 prohibits gifts by corporations, either direct or indirect. In 1969 and 1970 the Justice Department, acting on Johnson administration by the ing). Internal Revenue Service, instituted several prosecutions for indirect corporate giving.)

Several days later, on Oct. 18. Naylor swore, Marx introduced him to Robert G. (Bobby) Baker, then secretary Baker and ITT's then vice president and counsel, M. R.

Mitchell told him, Naylor said in the affidavit, "Please make out your check in favor of the 'Texas Business and in a brief entitled, 'United Professional Men's Committee States of America v. Federal Professional Men's Committee for Johnson for Vice Presi-reluctant, but finally yielded. abandond the merger effort.

His check, for the requested $1,200, was deposited on Nov. 10, two days after Lyndon B. Johnson was elected vice president, the affidavit said.

Naylor never tried to recover the money from ITT. This led to a bitter confrontation with Geneen in March, 1961. The ITT chief told him. Navlor said, "Everybody does it and the board wanted it this way. It is 'paying off big in Washington.'"

Marx has denied that he ever solicited campaign contributions. The Justice Department said that the FBI and a grand jury had found no basis for a prosecution. Naylor left

ITT years ago.

Whether Washington was "paying off big" was never proved. Certainly, however, ITT officers and directors did not damage their access to government officials whan they-along with thousands of others-gave substantial sums to the President's Clubs after Johnson became President.

But there doesn't seem to have been any payoff at the Justice Department in 1966, ITT, when seeking to effect biggest broadcasting merger in history, won approval from Federal Comquire American Broadcasting Co.

The merger set off a furor. led first by three dissenters on the FCC (Robert Bartley, Kenneth Cox and Nicholas Johnson) and then by others, principally, Sens. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.) and Wayne Morse (D-Ore.).

On the eve of FCC approval, the Justice Department entered the case, on antitrust grounds, and forced the FCC to hold a full hearing (the first investigations initiated in the one was a so-called oral hear-

The battle got so rough that Antitrust Division attorneys S orally and in briefs charged that Harold Geneen and other top ITT officials had misrepresented crucial facts in testimony given under to the Senate majority, and oath. The officials, along with then left him alone with others from ABC who were similarly accused, denied the charge.

In the end, the FCC approved the merger anew. The Justice Department appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals, Communications Commission." On Jan. 1, 1968, while Naylor said he was initially the appeal was pending, ITT