Mitchell Doesn't Want '72 Task, Aide Says

By Isabelle Hall United Press International

Richard G. Kleindienst said the war in Indochina, making and Barry M. Goldwater in this week Attorney General the draft more equitable and 1964 and he shares the attorney was a share of the draft more equitable and the shares the attorney general's reluctored. John N. Mitchell, architect of backing such youth-oriented torney President Nixon's 1968 election issues as cleaning up the en- about going back on the camvictory, does not want to run vironment. his 1972 campaign for re-election.

Kleindienst said of Mitchell. "I see him twice a day.

would do anything the President istration, nor did he link camdent asked. If the President pus disaffection with the out asked him to run the cam-come of the 1972 election.] paign, John Mitchell would. I think the President is going to get re-elected, but it won't be so easy by any means."

Kleindienst said one of the obstacles to an easy second term is the President's credibility gap with the young, which he says Mr. Nixon inherited from Lyndon B. John-Kleindienst, who has visited several college campuses as part of a Justice Department campaign to improve its communication with students, said: "They don't believe us. They believe as they were taught to believe about Johnson that Nixon wants to be on a big white horse like Caesar in the Vietnam war. They don't believe we belietve in free speech and the right of dissent.

"Their disbelief in our credulity stems from the environment that's existed on college campuses for many years. Johnson's political handling of the war and the draft inequities had a traumatic effect on these kids. The lack of credulity has been transferred to Nixon."

dent is making headway with tional director of field op-Deputy Attorney General young people by winding down erations for Mr. Nixon in 1968 importantly," ["But most "Of course, John Mitchell students disbelieve the admin-[Kleindienst said the Presi-f Kleindienst served as nageneral's reluctance paign trail.

"I'd do anything the Presi-Kleindienst said, "He is tell-dent wanted, but I really "We're very, very close," ing the truth and that will be wouldn't want to do that recognized." He added that he again." He said campaigning did not mean to imply that all required being away from home and "you eat too much. I gained 20 pounds the last

See MITCHELL, G5, Col. 1

MITCHELL, From G1

Turning to criticism of the way the Republicans handled the recent elections-some of it from ousted Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel-Kleindienst said the only reason it promoted criticism "is because it was so successful.

"I was one of those in the administration — when my opinion was sought-that recommended the President become directly involved in the senatorial elections. His vital programs were having tough enough sledding. I would recommend the same approach in 1972."

Kleindienst, who has been rumored a possible Mitchell successor/if the Attorney General runs Nixon's 1972 campaign, says, "I" would be one of those considered, among others, for Attorney General.'

But Kleindienst, 47, a native of Winslow, Ariz., who practiced law in Phoenix, said he would be "happy to go back to the provinces," if he lost out on the No. 1 job, so the new Attorney General could pick his own deputy.

CICHARD KLEINDIENST .. cites credibility problem