

Zapruder

4/2/71 Harold Weisberg

Yesterday I located someone who sees Abraham Zapruder's son fairly often.

He now lives not too far from here.

While I do not know what, if anything, he knows or whether or not he will see or speak to me, the effort is being made.

I did interview his father during 11/68

Clint Hill - HW

The Madison National Bank has an office on the first floor of the 1800 G St. Bldg., in Washington. The Secret Service has offices in that building, on the 8th floor, at least.

There is a teller who then worked there, that is, at the time of the Warren Report. This teller, while not believing the official story, got a copy of the report and asked an assortment of people in various ways connected with the case to autograph the Report.

Warren did, as did Rowley and everyone else asked - with one exception.

I guessed who this was. It is Clint Hill.

When asked to guess, I immediately eliminated Greer and almost as soon Kellerman. The others I didn't even consider.

I have no reason for this. It is just that I felt that if one would not, Hill would be that one. I have had this strange feeling about him since I first read his testimony and because he knew what he was doing when he testified to his observation of the location of the rear, non-fatal wound.
