MR. Weisberg:

A short note, a thought, with no answer expected: When Gov. John Connally of Texas was hit by the bullet which caused his wounds Nov. 22, 1963, he is reported to have said, "Oh, no, no, no" and "My God, they're going to kill us all." At this time he had heard one shot - what he thought was a shot - and he did not hear the shot which struck him. his claim, I believe. Now - was it a verbal rafter

-action? Or did the good Governor have a reason for saying "They are going...etc."

"They", implying more than one?

Just wondering. You're doing a wonderful job, Mr. Weisberg - Thanks.

Sincerely,

Robert Lee
