Re: Your letter of April 6, 1995

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

Thank you very much for your letter of April 6 regarding the "work" of Joseph Headrick and my correspondence with him. I am glad to be set straight on the issue of the accidental shooting which Secret Service Agent Hickey is purported to have committed. As I had not heard from Mr. Headrick in several months, and had never had an answer to my letter to the policemen in Australia (whom I queried regarding their reading of the ballistics evidence), I had pretty much come to the conclusion that this was going nowhere.

At any rate, I will be interested in seeing your work and would like to know, if you care to respond, who is publishing your eighth book? When you say no major publisher is yet willing to consider solid, factual writing on the assassination, what do you mean, precisely? That the implications of the material evidence are too explosive to handle? Who has been your publisher over the years?

I will bear your references to reliable experts in mind, should I receive any more submissions for non-fiction works on the assassination. I do, in fact, have something in now from a young graduate student who seeks to link the deed with the CIA and the Mafia, but he's more interested in explaining the motivation behind these groups taking such an action than he is in reconstructing the actual assassination, though he does take umbrage with a lot of the material evidence he believes to be tampered-with and "corrupted". The single bullet theory, etc.

At any rate, I was grateful to hear from you and shall go seek out your earlier writings in the library (our offices are not far from the main research division of the New York Public Library at 41st Street).

With best wishes,

Debbie Brown
