A federal court ruling yesterday narrowed the scope of James Earl Ray's evidentiary hearing to two major constitutional issues and restricted subpena power to a 100-mile territorial limit. .

The ruling, issued by U.S. Dist.
Judge Robert M. McRae Jr., said the hearing, expected to be sometime in September, would decide two major,

March 10, 1969, to the slaying of Dr.
Martin Luther King Jr. was made

"Intelligently and voluntarily."

Whether Ray had the "effective assistance of counsel" when facing the murder charge in Shelby County Criminal Court.

McRae's ruling, made after a pre-liminary hearing Friday, stated that the first issue refers to coercion, threats and promises of Ray's attorneys before he pleaded guilty.

Ray must prove that his constitutional rights were violated before he can withdraw his guilty plea and stand trial for murder, McRae said.

At Friday's preliminary hearing,

Ray's present attorneys, Bernard Fens-terwald and James H. Lesar of Washington and Robert Livingston of Memphis, claimed that literary royalties created a conflict of interest for lawyers representing Ray in 1969.

Ray was originally represented by Birmingham attorney Arthur Hanes but fired him four months before pleading guilty. Ray claims Hanes promised to represent him in exchange for 40 per cent of all royalty rights to William Bradford Huie's book "He Slew the Dreamer."

Alabama author Huie paid Ray $35,000 for exclusive rights to information about the slaying and for biographical material used in magazine articles.

When Hanes was fired, Ray hired Houston attorney Percy Foreman and agreed to give him 60 per cent of the book royalties, attorneys for Ray said,

The conflict-of-interest charges that Ray's 1969 attorneys did not properly investigate the case were outlined in nine "most pertinent" points by the U.S. Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. The Cincinnati appellate court granted the request for an evidentiary hearing on Jan. 29.

Ray's present attorneys had asked McRae's court for power to subpena Hanes, Huie, Foreman and possibly several others to testify at the evidentiary hearing. Hanes, Huie and Foreman all live more than 100 miles from Memphis.

However, despite the 100-mile territorial limit in yesterday's ruling, Hanes has notified the court that he will appear at the hearing, and a deposition has been taken from Foreman.

"I wrote everything up until the time I get arrested in England. I jury a samed he read that mass of that particular area, in that I was not guilty."

Ray at a testified that he was una that a that I oreman and that he defined a come.

Ray and testified that he was unawer that Foreman and Hanes had signed a contract with Look Manazine for articles, but that the agreement was contingent upon a guilty plan.

Although the contract was signed March 17, 1830, Lesar-contended that it was written before Ray pleaded gullty.

Ray said he was convinced that his pullty pleas was a "technical" and the which would enable him to fire Poreman. "It was my distinct impression that the plea would be some kind of technical plea to get me out of town," he added.

Ray said Foreman first mentioned the idea of pleadlag guilty in a Feb. 13, 10:0, letter. In the letter, Foreman wrote:

weeks reviewing the nature of the case the state of Tennessee has against you. I have surveyed jury sentiment in this county and jury verdicts in other recent cases.

"In my opinion, there is little more than a .3 per cent chance of your receiving the death penalty verdict if you go to trial. Furthermore, there is 160 per cent chance of a guilty verdict. Neither I nor any other lawyer can change the overwhelming evidence that has been assembled against you."

Ray said in earlier conversations with Foreman, "I told him it (ceilty ploa) was ridiculated the state was relying on mostly circumstantial evidence. The most the ate could get me on was ding and abetting."

Ray said Foreman "tried to give me the impression" the jury would be stocked with blacks and "chamber of commerce types." Foreman had earlier told him that he "could prove I wasn't the shooter," said Ray. "I had the feeling this was kind of a blitz on his part."

Ray said on Feb. 18, 1959, he senned a letter drafted by Foreman agreeing to plead guilty. He said there was no indication on the letter that Foreman had written it.

After he was unable to convince Forenan to go to trial. Ray said he agreed to modifying his literary contract with Ferenan. He said Foremen agreed to settle for $165,000 if a pullty plea were entered. An earlier contract entitled Foreman all royalities, from motion pictures and books.

Ray said he hoped that by modifying the contract, he would later have enough modey to hire another law yer. Ray said the new contract contained a provision that Ray would not create any "embyrrassing circumstances" in court.

Ray said he felt he could not fire Foreman before the hearing because the late Criminal Court Judge Presten Battle had warned him against another change of autorneys.

Ray testified that two days after pleading guilty on March 10, 1903 he wrote letters repudiating the plea and suggesting that in, "could be involved in some type of crime and not be aware of it."

"I suppose the people who manufactured the ritle could to some extent to held responsible although they didn't have direct involvement," he said.

"Did you assume the rifle found on South Main was used to kill King?" asked Lesar.

"I didn't make no strong assumption in that area," said Ray. he wrote the letters he wrote the last yes after his rolly plea as to Sen-James Eastland. D-Miss, He said he told Fastland: "I personally did not sheat Dr. Moren Luther King, but I believe I am partly responsible for his death."

Ray said, however, recalling the day in court when he pleaded gally, that he had objected to Foreman's statements to the jury that implied there was no conspiracy in the King killing. Ray said it seemed to him that Foreman was agreeing with then U.S. Atty. Gen. Ramsey Chirk and the late F E I director J. Edgar Hoover that he was the flone nut who killed King.

Recorded to the first and that he was sliving, as more trouble, with his evenight at the time of the slaving of Dr. King, and that this would be used in his defense if he gets a new trial. The state contends that King was shot from a distance of about 200 feet.

Speaking of the possibility of a new trial. Ray said there was some discussion between Ray and Hands that the condition of my eyes would be relevant.

The state asked the Supreme Court to vacate McRae's orders on the ground that they are "unwarranted invasions of individual and corporate privacy."

Ray was in his second day on the stand today in the second week of the evidentiary hearing before Judge McRae, and he was still being examined by Lesar. Ray started testifying Friday.

As he did Friday, Ray continued his discussion of the events that preceded has guilty plea.

Ray fired Hanes and Foreman took ever the case on Nov. 12, 1868. Ray said he only saw Foreman "Three or four times" between November and January, but maintained that Foreman as iate as February, 1853, was still readying for trial of the case.

Ray said that cround Jan. 3, he read an article in a Memohis newsparer indicating that the possibility of a guilty plea was being discussed.

"I asked Mr. Foremen about it, I thought the story probably came from the state, and Mr. Foreman said to forget it, it didn't mean anything," said Ray. Shelby County Airy, Gen.

Shelby County Aity, Gen. Hugh Stanion Jr., fermenly assistant public defender, win along with his father, Hugh Stanton, was appointed by Judge Battle to assist Foreman in preparation of the Ray case, testified last week that his father had first discussed the possibility of a guilty plea with former Atty. Gen. Phil Canale in December.

In February, Ray testified, Foreman visited him at Shelby Courty Just and showed him "about 10 or 12 pictures" that he wanted Ray to identify.

Ray's attorneys have contended that Ray did not know he was coming to Memphis to particulate in a shooting, but it as and though he was here to buy puns and was accompanied by a mysterious man known to them only as "Raoul."

Ray said he "got the impression" that Foreman wanted him to identify the pictures of the individuals—"the majority of the individuals were of Latin oil in." said Ray—107 the government.

"I got the impression he wanted me to identify one of those individuals as the person who shot Martin Littler King... I told bim (Foreman), for several reasons. I dida's want to get involved in that type of operation. They would put me as a state's witness...' said Ray.
