Dear both,

We both found "Small Sacrifices" very worthwhile and we enjoyed it.

I hope it was as successful as it deserved to be.

It was particularly good to learn that there are those who want TV to deal with real concerns. One of the reasons I've been looking at TV less and less (we do not have cable) is the absence of this in commercial TV.

I was particularly impressed with Fawcett's acting and that of the girl, both to me outstanding.

I'd never seen Fawcett in anything but I had seen her picture in newspapers.

I had the impression that she was no more than a sex symbol.

Maybe this made her wonderful performance even more impressive.

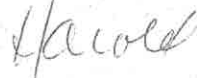

We appreciate your thoughtfulness in sending us these cassettes and we have begun lending them around.

I don't remember whether I offered you a cassette of what to me is the only good and worthwhile documentary on any political assassination, "Reasonable Doubt," by Chip Selby, a friend. It was his master's thesis at the University of Maryland. It won CINE's Golden Eagle in history in 1988.

If you'd like one please let me know. Chip sent me several.

Ditto if you have any friends who would like one.

Again thanks and best wishes,

Harold Weisberg
