Dear Harold,

One of your letters was waiting for me when I returned home and received the other a few days ago. I was glad to hear from you, but did not like what I heard about Livingstone. It does seem like someone could stop him from spreading the rumors with evil intent. I just don't understand the man.

I have been unable to contact Mary since I returned home, but I keep trying every day and no one I have talked too knows where they are. I will keep on until I find them.

We really enjoyed the visit with you and your wife, it was just not long enough. And thanks for the information you furnished. Also tell the people at the restaurant I send my regards.

We had a nice trip back home no trouble and was ^{9/22} to be back, it always take me a few days to rest up after a long trip. There is nothing new to report here. I am getting some calls from T.V. stations wanting to do some interviews for this coming November, so far I have only done one for PBS I have dodged all the others.

Thanks again for every thing and I will stay in touch.

Sincerely,

Jim Leavelle

Dear Jim,

We picked the mail up when we left for lunch at Hana's restaurant. Everett was quite pleased that you remembered them and to get your regards.

Roger Feinman told me last evening that there has been no answer on the Ferrell phone for some time so he believes they may be away. I hope they have a chance to relax and enjoy themselves, not that Buck has taken a turn for the worse.

Roger has written an excellent small book on Lifton and his mistitled book. It is neither best nor evidence.

Any effort to understand Livingstone must begin with the understanding that he is irrational and that as part of this he has an enormous and entirely unjustified self-concept. If you can get Mary to tell you what he actually said and did last October at BSA ^{if you} and then ^{say any} can believe he was genuine in all of that indecency you'll begin to understand him. Dr. Bob Artwohl, who had a high regard for Mary, was here most of Friday, until he was certain to be quite late when he got home for supper. We both liked him, disagree as we do about the assassination and its investigations. He told me as Mary had not, that Livingstone actually ^{she} believes that Mary's daughter was married to Clint Mutcherson. That's crazy! The publisher knows he is not all there but they made so much on his two High Trash books they care about nothing else. They know what they are doing. That is one of the reasons Mary ^{she} would try to get her old law firm to attempt something in advance, at least put the publisher on notice, whether or not she does anything later, that what the book will say about her is false and defamatory. To the degree it is possible for me, I have. I'm sorry she has not kept me as informed as she might have because I might have been able to do something with it, ^{and may also in the days ahead} Once the book is out the damage is done. And it will have us all as accessories at least after the fact. ^{also} In his letters he has Mary and me accessories before the fact.

We enjoyed your visit, too, and hope that when next you visit your daughter you'll have time to come up again. Remember, she is welcome to any surplus flowers ^{she} has. And this year the day lilies I love are the most beautiful I remember them.

Best wishes,

Harold
