

Libel Post
6.3.72

Art dealer Fernand Legros, who is already suing author Clifford Irving for starring him in a book called "Fake!", has also taken legal action against the author and publishers of another book about him entitled "The Fabulous Frauds." It was disclosed yesterday that author Lawrence Jeppson and publisher Weybright and Talley had agreed to withdraw the book from publication and turn over all copies to Legros for destruction. The book, which claims he conspired with an alleged art forger to sell phoney paintings to gullible American collectors, wasn't selling well anyway, the publisher admitted.