Dear Mr. Weisberg:

How nice it was to hear from you and especially nice of you to share your book. I congratulate you, it looks like a fine job and I know how much research and effort must have gone into it. I know that Bill would be extremely proud. He was certainly happy to be able to help you as far as getting it published was concerned.

I now see that you are planning two more books, due this year, so obviously you are not just sitting around twiddling your thumbs. Books like these are extremely valuable. They cut through all the propoganda of those who would twist history to suit their purposes and it is very important that those in the future know the truth.

Keep up the good work and, once again, congratulations on having your book now finally available.

Sincerely,

Mrs. William Loeb

P.S. As to your final question, I do not believe that Bill ever assured Crowell against loss. He and Tommy Crowell had a good personal relationship and he would have considered such legal details unnecessary.
