Dear Gary,

I forgot to tell you.

Richard Waybright established a relationship with Jack Revill before his first trip to Texas.

Revill has a married aughter who lives in Virginia not far from Washington. He used to visit her often. Waybright visited him there. He also threw a backyard barbecue for Revill to which he invited me. I could not go.

I am sure that on his first trip to Dallas Richard visited with Revill.

May have stayed with him.

I tell you this because Harry has often boasted of the former Dallas police working for him.

He had to have some compelling reason for keeping Richard in his employ after he had irrefutable proof that Richard had stolen some of his information and sold it to Harry's enemy, Lifton.

Of the uses Harry would have for local police, is there anything more obvious that getting what could be considered or twisted into dirt on us?

I think it is obvious that Revill could have been one working for Harry and could have led others to do that.

For your thinking,

Harold

Three of Richard's letters say that Mark Crouch was Harry's source, perhaps main source, of his information on us. Is there any way in which Crouch could have had this on hand? I know of none or of any reasons even to suspect that he had. He has told me of a good relationship with the Phila. FBI field office. Could be through its West Chester residency, if there is one. Is there a more likely source for Crouch's information he has not yet denied giving Harry?
