Dear Boris,

Fortunately, I have returned "Murder Most Foul". I sent comment with it. It's, like nothing and it makes numerous, serious, basic and entirely inexcusable errors (Mel-Rex Bldg., Berkley St, etc.), indicative of inoriginal work largely based upon what the author hears.

I am waiting to see if you can get from Howard McCann, who, I think published the hardback, on news, on Blichner, of "The Devil To Pay", pictures of Jack (Walter A.) Youngblood, "head" of the Robin "ing to k.

My interest derives from the remarkable parallel between his name and his career and the occurrence of the same, not-too-common name in an identical career in the testimony of Nancy Ferrin Röch. His address: Texasone, Texas. His pet hate: Castro (and those he imagines helped Castro). His business: gun running. His desire: to participate in an attempt to assassinate Castro.

I stayed up last night and read the book.

Thanks for the try.

I speak in New York 3/4.

Sincerely,
