Dear Hoke,

Bringier has reinstituted that frivolous suit that got tossed out of court. He served the magazine and publisher by mail but not me, saying he'd await my arrival in New Orleans. Which is another way of saying that if I stay out of New Orleans I'll save myself a lot of legal expense.

I'll be there about the 17th or 18th (not High Noon stuff), about when I'd earlier planned. If I can get a good lawyer, I'll file a countersuit, and against other defendants, too. The time^{is} here is exquisite, for the suit has no validity-it is but blackmail - but I had just gotten into other and very interesting things. And they involve -you guessed it -El Stupido! Carlos himself. If we can get together, I think you'll be interested in the story.

All of this makes me more interested in Nestor Marquez-Diaz, who continues to take suits that cannot win on a contingency basis. That does not make sense at all. Not even a stupid lawyer can be that stupid. Parker is a partner in the firm and did some of the work.

Know any company connections? Marquez-Diaz was connected with Ricardo Davis, but I do not now recall my source. Davis was company. Have you any pictures of his camp across the lake? Can you help me get any of them and of the young people who testified before Liebeler, particularly Philip Geraci, Vance Blalock, Ed Voebel testified before Jenner.

Have you a list of the known company people in N.O.?

All of this could be quite important.

Hope we can get together.

Sincerely,
