

12 October 1972

Dear Harold,

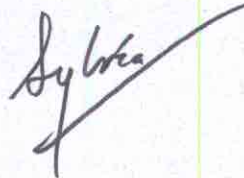

Today I received your letter, erroneously dated "11/8/72", and copy correspondence, in an envelope bearing the exhortation "Don't worry or fear". I do not quite understand that injunction but you no doubt had some reason for it.

Perhaps the enclosed copy of my recent letter to Ed Williams will serve to provide some of the information requested in your letter, including an account of my illnesses and present medical status. I would add that not only did I not write any letter to Joesten in the last year or more but that I have not seen his so-called "truth letter" for at least a year. However, I would very much like to see the letter to which you referred and which you (and perhaps others) felt that I might have authored. I can tell you categorically that I did not write and have not seen the letter in question.

Forgive me, Harold, if I cannot write you at greater length and in greater detail at this time but perhaps the copy of my letter to Ed will suffice to indicate my views in re: Marshall/Graham/Wecht.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
