Why Aren't They More Unlike Us?

R. NIXON'S bold decision to mine M. Haiphong, bomb Hanoi and blow the hell out of The China-Vietnam R.R. Co. while offering new peace terms, represents, the experts agree, "a wellcalculated risk."

The risk, it can now be told, was well calculated by the U.S. Bureau of Calculations. The complex calculations that went into the risk taking were explained to newsmen vesterday by the Bureau's Chief Calculator, Homer T. Pettibone.

A transcript of the briefing follows:

Q-Can you tell us, Mr. Pettibone, exactly what risk is involved here?

A—Yes, World War III. You see, one of the mines we've planted in Haiphong harbor may blow up a Russian ship. We had to calculate whether the crazy, irresponsible, power-mad Kremiin leaders would blow up one of our ships in return - thereby risking World War III.

Q-And you calculated they wouldn't?

A—Yes, based on our experience dur-ing the Cuban Missile Crisis we calculated the odds were 14.2 to 11.5 that they weren't that crazy. Thus, it was safe for us to risk World War III on the grounds the Russians weren't brespensible enough to risk World War III.

Q-It's good to know we can count on the Russians.

A-True. But at the same time we announced this bold, decisive step to end the war, we took the precaution of sending the Russians secret signals, reassuring them that we didn't really mean it and not to take it personal if one of their ships hap-pened to bump into one of our mines.

Q-How are these secret signals transmitted?

If he twitches it while denouncing the Russians on television, it signals them that he doesn't really mean a thing he's saying.

. Q-What about the Chinese? Is there a risk involved in blowing up their railroad trains?

A-Very little. Now, as you know, the Chinese leaders are wily, inscrutable. power-mad revolutionaries with little regard for human life nor any fear of nuclear, weapons. But what's a railroad train or two among friends? We calculated they won't risk World War III over a couple. So we were safe in doing so.

Q-Excuse me, Mr. Pettibone, didn't you also calculate the Chinese wouldn't enter the Korean War?

A-You know the Bureau's metter 'Win a few, lose a few."

Q-About stepping up the bomble Hanoi while offering them new peace terms, what's the risk there?

A-That they'll think we're crass. know how stubborn they are. Dropp bombs on their heads may actual them to lose their tempers and thus no see our peaceful intentions. They even pout and blindly reject our offer out of sheer childish petulice. But we are counting on them to ris we find putty enumbers and achieved of the same for the good of same for the good of same find the tree also considering accepting ir latest peace offer?

While they're killing our boys? Nev-

Q-As T understand it then, Mr. Pettibone, we are now counting on the responsibleness of the crazy Russians, the caution of the fearless Chinese and the maturity of the childish North Vietnamese to end this war and avoid a nuclear holocaust?

A-Well, we have to count on someone
