PM X orshi

By George Natanson The Los Angeles Times

years have found military dic-ernments. tatorships and de facto gov ernments of both the extreme right and left appearing in Latin America.

While the Organization American States debated Fidel Castro's Communist dictator-ship in Cuba, an increasing number of right-wing de facto sue before the regional body. Military Increases Power governments rule with imgovernments rule with impunity. They apparently will continue to do so.

One attempt has been made to outlaw these regimes which have been described as "polit- der the thumb of dictatorships ical banditry." For almost two years Venezuela, which egislate against themselves. brought charges of aggression against Cuba, has tried with out success to bring Inter reject to military pleasure. military power. American regional action to counter the threat of military coups. Among other things, it was hoped some measure of protection would be offered to Rica, El Salvador, Mexico, MEXICO CITY - Recent constitutionally elected gov-

Support Lacking

However, the Betancourt Doctrine, so named for Romulo Betancourt, former President sufficient support among OAS member states, including the United States, to bring the isthe Betancourt Doctrine can make no headway is that of the 20 Latin-American countries, eight are presently ununderstandably hesitant to n another three, armies stand eady to move if the civilian presidents show signs "weakness." of

A BAR

Only in six - Chile, Costa Panama and Uruguay — is there relative political free-- is dom. Due either to stiff civilian control won through a hard fought social revolution, a long history of democratic tradi-tion or because the armed of Venezuela, has failed to win forces are small or non-sufficient support among OAS existent.

But elsewhere, the story is different.

In Bolivia a revolutionary 1952 has recently been forced are never far away.

to add an air force general as President Ousted president must contend with Communist ties. However, the the two Somoza brothers Brazilian generals quickly

A STATE OF STATE

tral-American country more than 30 years.

Peru and Argentina present hope for the future, but the military in both countries within the past four years have overthrown constitutional governments.

for

Outright dictatorships exist in Guatemala, Honduras, Haiti, Ecuador, Paraguay and Cuba.

In the Dominican Republic the pattern was changed a little. The military threw out the legally elected government and then established a civilian overnment responsible for a triumvirate which has a diffineasure of economic progress cult time holding together. nd political stability since However, its military overlords

In Nicaragua, a civilian efficient president accused of whose father ruled this Cen-verted to type, employing tactics common to both right-| sufficient food and work which wing extremists and Commu- will help them obtain these mists, denying others their po- basic necessities is now comlitical freedoms.

In Haiti the most oppressive, hated idetatorship in the hemisphere exists without even a this realization, there is also moral condemnation from the Americas. - ernments have increased or are threatening at the very time when the Alliance for Progress has become the hope of the America's vast underprivileged.

They are beginning to see in the Alliance the opportunity for release from long centuries of seridom and poverty. It represents escape not only to economic betterment but to the freedom which the ex-ample of the United States and U.S. propaganda efforts have led them to expect.

Schools, health centers, decent homes, suitable clothing, ing within the grasp of many. If the majority of Latin Americans are awakening to a growing understanding and respect for the vote together Ironically, diotatorial gov. with an awareness of their government and an opportunity to participate in it.