Mitchell Asks Reforms in

By James Clayton Washington Post Staff Writer

LONDON, July 16-The administration of criminal justice in the United States has come to a crossroads, Attorney General John N. Mitchell said today, as he called for sweeping changes in the procedures used in handling trials and ap-

Speaking before a session of the American Bar Association here, Mitchell said that excessive delays in processing criminal cases have turned the American system of justice into a "caricature of justice" in some respects. crowded calendars, the breakdown of speedy justice, the loss of public confidence in the courts-these are the advanced symptoms of an ailment that has permeated our justice system," he said.

"We face in the United States," he asserted, "a situation where the discovery of guilt or innocence as a function of the courts is in danger of drowning in a sea of legal-isms."

See ABA, A4, Col. 4

ABA, From A1

Without specifically saying so, Mitchell made it clear that he was refering, among other things, to some decisions of the Supreme Court in recent years which have extended and elaborated the application of the protections contained in to be totally "unacceptable." the Bill of Rights. He called for the judges to "begin to recognize that society, too, has its rights, including the right to expect that the courts will of protecting suspects from do justice, that the innocent the dangers of police interrowill be cleared, and the guilty will be corrected."

The judiciary, he said, should recognize "that perhaps it has been too preoccupied in the exhilarating adven- posed by the Supreme Court's ture of making new law and Miranda decision unnecessarnew public policy from the ily hamper legitimate police bench, and that this function investigative work. The Mirof the courts has outdistanced and a decision permits a sus-guilt and innocence."

hearings "designed mainly to that a suspect be made fully deprive the jury of material aware of his right not to incriand relevant evidence" be cur- minate himself before any tailed, that some of the re-questioning begins. quirements police now must meet in their investigative of the ABA, immediately en-procedures be relaxed, and dorsed Lord Widgery's criti-that the post-trial reviews of cism of the Miranda decision onvictions be sharply reduced amid a wave of applause from n number from those now vailable.

Each of these areas has been subjected to Supreme_Court scrutiny in the last decade and the court's decisions have headed in the opposite direction from that urged by the atorney general.

Only a sharp reversal of this trend, Mitchell indicated, can restore public confidence in the Americansystem of justice by making it possible for the courts to do their work quickly and efficiently. Other suggestions for speeding up the courts - such as one being tried in some areas where criminal charges are dismissed if trials are not begun - were brushed promptly aside by the attorney general as "no solution at all."

In one aspect of his attack the lawyers attending the conon the courts, Mitchell re-rention. ceived support from the lord chief justice Speaking immediately after Widgery said he found the Supreme Court's decisions in recent years involving the use of Lord Widgery said the leaned too far in the direction gation. While arguing that citizens must be protected from he said, being compelled to confess crimes, Lord Widgery said restrictions such as those imthe more sober task of judging pect to have his lawyer present if he wishes while he is be-Mitchell urged that pre-trial ing questioned and directs

Edward L. Wright, president

In another speech comparof England. ing some aspects of British and American law, Chief Justhe attorney general, Lord tice Warren E. Burger urged that substantial changes be made in the way in which American lawyers are trained confessions in criminal trials for courtroom work and disciplined for misconduct. American law schools, he said, percourts in both the United form well in training students States and Great Britain have to think and write but have fallen short in training them "how to behave properly, in the professional sense of that term." He had criticism for both prosecutors and defense counsel and urged the ABA to take steps aimed at improving the training of young lawyers and strengthening the mechanisms available for punishing those who engage in misconduct.