Pagan's Death Laid to D

body was found Sunday sealed ing. in a steel barrel in the Chesapeake & Delaware Canal, has evening when a fisherman no- weekend of July 5. been ruled accidental due to ticed the barrel lying on the A State police investigator Examiner.

Dr. Werner U. Spitz, who performed the autopsy at the request of Maryland State police, said James K. Vargas, 22, of Woodbridge, Va., had diabetes and was taking daily injections of insulin as well as regular doses of a narcotic.

Dr. Spitz said that Vargas' body had been immersed in i water for "two or three days" but said the way the body was jammed into the steel drum welded shut.

The death of a Pagan motor-probably prevented a great cycle club member, whose amount of water from entergas had been reported missing from a Pagan encampment Vargas was found Sunday near North East, Md., on the an overdose of narcotics, by Canal shore near Chesapeake said they will try ot determine the Baltimore City Medical City, Md. The barrel had been who placed the body in the, container.