Philanthropist to Match Funds For Mayor and Badillo in Race

Stewart R. Mott, the young Governor Rockefeller and Senator Eugene J. McCarthy for President last year, has taken a full-page advertisement in today's New York Times, offering to match contributions to the primary campaigns of Mayo Lindsay, a Republican, and Herman Badillo, a Democrat.

Mr. Mott, who is 31 years old, said hew anted to make sure that the voters had a choice between two good candidates. He said he supported both candidates mainly because both have good records on two of his major interests — arms control and birth control, causes to which he had donated heavily.

In an interview yesterday, Mr. Mott said that he had place the ad — which cost $7,440 because he had determined that "neither candidate has the nomination sewed up and neither has enough money."

date had advance knowledge gan's leading philanthropists, about the offer in the ad. He with his wealth estimated at made no mention of it to the $800-million.

Lindsay camp, and all he told the stimated at the stimated at directtors of General Motors an hough we are at oodds political-one of the company's largest ly."

Associated Press Stewart R. Mott

Mr. Mott said neither candi-stockholders, is one of Michia Badillo aide was "look in lived on a Chinese junk berthed in the East River part of the Tuesday's paper."

The philantropist derives his income — estimated at about $1-million annually — from funds set up by his father, Charles S. Mott of Flint, Mich., who will be 94 next Monday. The elder Mr. Mott, an automotive pioneer, who is a senior member of the board of directtors of General Motors an investment of the safety and the East River part of the time he was attending Columbia University, described his father as a conservative Republican who differed sharply with his choice of liberal, provisive candidates.

However, Steward Mott added that "the family relationship is quite cordial vendough we are at oodds political-