ED BUCK, President of 115 A West Santa Fe Avenue, and an employee of the legal department of the Santa Fe Land Office, Santa Fe, New Mexico, furnished the following information.

He related that while he was a student at the Law School of Southern Methodist University (SMU) in Dallas, Texas, he was in the habit of eating breakfast on Sunday mornings at Luby's Cafeteria, which is located directly across from the University campus.

On several occasions while he was eating at this cafeteria on Sunday mornings, he noticed a tall slender man in the cafeteria and on one occasion in either April or May of 1963, this man was standing next to him, BUCK, in the line at the steam table. This man, whose name is unknown to BUCK, struck up a conversation regarding Cuba, the general tenor of which was that this man did not feel that the United States was being fair in its treatment of FIDEL CASTRO and expressed a favorable attitude toward the CASTRO regime in Cuba. This unknown man then asked BUCK if the latter had met a man who had recently moved to Dallas after marrying a Russian woman in Russia. He noted that this man was a former Marine and that his name was OSWALD. This man stated that he had met OSWALD through another person in Ft. Worth and mentioned that OSWALD was taking a job in a book depository in Dallas where the unknown man had been working.

This same man commented that he was a designer at the Bell Helicopter Plant located between Dallas and Ft. Worth, Texas, and in addition he was employed in a book depository where the school books are kept. He stated that he liked to come to the cafeteria near SMU because of the conversations he got into with the students from the University.

BUCK described this man with whom he conversed in Luby's Cafeteria as follows:

Sex	Male
Race	White
