Dear Rod,

Two purposes, something to float and something to ask.

Since the phlebitis and required longer sleep, the little thinking time I have is when I walk, the one exercise I'm allowed and necessary to force circulation in the legs. Sometimes I think of what I've been working on, sometimes my mind just wanders over recent developments. Walking a little while ago I got an idea I may have mentioned.

When I return from the walk I have to rest for a period, so I can't just sit down and write what I've thought of.

Not to lose these precious gems I've gotten an ultra-compact recorder, pocket size. When the weather is not too cold for my hands to hold it I intend to make notes with it and then dub them onto a standard cassette. I'm hoping to find a part-time typist. If I cannot, can you listen to cassettes?

If you can, I can send them and you can return them later.

From time to time I have to listen to cassettes. For this I have an inexpensive Panasonic standard size. Costs $40, pretty good machine, and uses longer-lasting C cells. When I'm driving I listen to the tapes. Works for me, may be valueless to you.

My man on the MK cryptonym CIA series turns out to have been, as I was convinced, for real. He was in touch with Jack Anderson a long time ago and believed Anderson would do nothing. After about six months he was in touch with me. Not anonymously, as with Anderson. Now Anderson has followed only the initial leads and confirmed the basis only, that there were MK Ultra and MK Delta projects of this character. He apparently did not learn of MK Naomi and that Nathan Gordon was in charge. I don't know if this will kill the deal there or not but if as I suspect it does let me know and I'll help Les Whitten on it. I'll probably hear from this guy by tomorrow night again. He said he call within that period.

It is only a hunch, but suppose this man was part of the "experiments?" A victim? He has nervous manifestations in his speech. Would a first-person account have value? How much?

Best,

Harold Weisberg

Ex-CIA Chief William Colby, a lawyer, has his own lawyer now, Edward Bennett Williams. Williams, owner of the Washington Redskins, is one of the country's most prestigious lawyers. His clients have ranged from the late Senator Joe McCarthy and Mafia Boss Frank Costello to the Democratic National Committee.

And the CIA.

For the CIA Williams established the legal right to libel, slander and interfere with the lives of whomever it chooses.

This was done with secret evidence, believed to be without precedent in American history. It is up to the same dirty businessmen Thomson

Williams told Federal District Judge Rosal Thompson (right) that "national security" required CIA affidavits be kept secret, conned the respected Baltimore jurist into believing it, and until now they have been a CIA secret.

Harold Weisberg, former intelligence analyst, ~~investigator~~ investigator and political-assassination expert, has obtained these until-now secret affidavits from the CIA under the Freedom of Information law.

A They disclose the hazard to all Americans if this precedent is not overturned and the fraud perpetrated on the court and the man ruined by what the CIA did to him through a covert employee. continuing

This is one of the as-yet unexposed facets of undiminished and illicit CIA domestic activity.

Eiire Heine (right) was an Estonian emigre, editor of an Estonian newspaper newspaper. He lived northeast of Washington. Juri Raus worked with the CIA with a cover of being a road-department employee. Raus, under CIA orders, launched a campaign to ruin Heine. It worked. Heine filed suit in Baltimore. The CIA hired Williams and his firm. It alleged the ruin of the innocent Heine was essential to the protection of its intelligence sources in these secret affidavits that Heine's lawyers could not cross examine and prove false. (Rod- I think they never saw them but I'm not sure and haven't taken the time to check.) They are trying to have a federal judge only see affidavits in a current case.

As the affidavits disclose there never was any more than a counter-intelligence agent's wrong suspicion behind the CIA's decision to ruin Heine. Up through the chain of command to Richard Helms, then chief of dirty tricks and now another deposed CIA head, this error was supported. As Helms moved up to the top position he filed five false affidavits in this one case.

How libelling and ruining an innocent man could possibly protect CIA's intelligence sources is not even suggested and without cross examination could not be proven or disproven.

It represent a terrifying return of the star chamber in which any American can be victimized with secret non-evidence merely called evidence by a spook functionary.

Bob, this is off the top, longer if not entirely different than you's do, to give an idea. The rest would deal with the facts and the affidavits. I think five are by Helms, between 1965 and 1969, and one by former CIA General Counsel Lawrence Houston.

During This time Helms moved up from chief of dirty tricks to DDCI to DCI.
