[A source close to the Senate Watergate investigation who reported] McCord's identification of Haldeman today also said that the Watergate investigation discovered top White House personnel were involved in 1972 espionage and bugging activities, and those personnel have a history of being involved in similar activities in past elections. The source said, "We're talking about people working around Nixon from 1962 on."

According to a judgment filed October 30, 1964, by the San Francisco County Superior Court, Nixon and Haldeman, who was manager of his '62 campaign for Governor here in California, had approved an effort to undermine the campaign of [his] Democratic opponent, former Governor Edmund G. Brown. Neither Nixon nor Haldeman were defendants in the case, although Judge Byron Arnold ruled that a postcard poll organized by the Nixon campaign committee and aimed at undermining support for Brown was reviewed, amended and finally approved by Mr. Nixon personally, and that Mr. Nixon and Mr. Haldeman approved the plan and project.
