sailed the report as distorted and misleading, although it did not dispute the $17-million figure.

In fact, according to the Capitol Hill officials, investigations being conducted by two other Congressional committees are producing evidence that they believe will show that total spending related to the President and Budget in the name of the Department of Description was spent on the surrounding property owned by the President's private retreat in a secret "military fund" expended by the White House military aide at the discretion of the President. This is said to be a "blind" fund set up by the Office of Management and Budget in the name of the Department of Description.
