xon to Dramatize Leadership

By Carroll Kilpatrick Washington Post Staff Writer

President Nixon's State of the Union message, which he the message, which will be deis planning to deliver to Con-livered before a joint session foreign and domestic affairs.

Officials said yesterday that the President is working on the field of energy, which is to insurance companies to buy an urban transportation reve the message in the seclusion expected to occupy the Presi-policies tailored to meet miniof his San Clemente home in dent and Congress for much mum standards the govern-provide funds to states and full realization that it affords of the year and beyond. an opportunity to focus attention on issues unrelated to new emphasis in the domestic ward M. Kennedy of Massa-scandal.

Some aides predicted that ance. gress in person about Jan. 23, of Congress late this month, to provide coverage for all mum coverage for all persons. will represent a major attempt may contain important surto dramatize his leadership in prises, but there was no indication what they may be.

Otherwise, the principal plan for national health insur- administration plan and urge

It will be a revision of the proposal he first made in 1971 Americans without a tax increase.

One surprise could come in employee-employer payments focus in the domestic field or ment would establish.

Watergate and charges of area will be on the President's chusetts will attack the Nixon instead a national health program financed by the government and guaranteeing mini-

In addition to energy and health insurance, the Presi-Financing would be through dent's message is expected to cities to develop their own Democrats led by Sen, Ed-public transportation systems The President is not ex-

in State of Union Add

on a welfare reform program tion on himself. but it is not yet ready for the President to incorporate in his new legislative program.

Another section of the message is expected to discuss the impact of the energy shortage on environmental programs, and new proposals are expected on rural development revenue-sharing programs.

Last year, the President sent a long State of the Union the drafting of the address. message to Congress by messenger instead of delivering it in person.

Jan. 20 and did not want to re- als for the address. Vice Presi-ing a bill of impeachment, shortage and related issues.

fare program. The Depart later with a State of the Union the meetings but Mr. Nixon must not only focus on nonment of Health, Education and address and be accused of try- did not. Welfare is continuing to work ing to focus too much atten-

The failure to deliver the message in person, however, was widely criticized, and from the Domestic Council White House advisers are also have been sent to the unanimous in urging the Pres- President. ident to go in person with his message this year.

Raymond K. Price, the President's chief speech writer emphasis in the message is exsince he entered office, is in pected to be on pending pro-San Clemente helping with posals in the fields of elemento California the White House grams, drug trafficking, conorganized a series of meetings sumer protection and election The chief reason, one aide between Republican congres- reform. said, was that he had deliv-sional leaders and White ered his inaugural address on House aides to discuss propos- Judiciary Committee consider-various federal agencies on the public to new programs. proposals for the State of the Union and special studies

Wth so many unenacted presidential proposals still before Congress, much of the tary and secondary education Before the President went aid, better communities pro-

However, with the House constituents

pected to propose a new wel-turn to the Capitol a few days | dent Ford attended most of |Nixon supporters believe he Watergate issues but direct The customary reports from the attention of Congress and

> These aides believe that the voters are more concerned about energy and cost-of-living problems than Watergate, and Melvin R. Laird, counselor to the President, said yesterday that preliminary reports from congressmen who have sampled voter opinion support that belief.

> Laird said he had talked with 30 or 40 congressmen and they have not reported any great push for impeachment.

> On the contrary, Laird said, they have found that their deeply are concerned about the energy