I.R.S. Official Who Praised Nixons Promoted to Head Philadelphia Office

By EILEEN SHANAHAN Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Merch 25-The Internal Revenue official who praised President Nixon for the careful preparation of his 1970 and 1971 tax returns and who accepted them, without change, after a very brief audit has been promoted to head the agency's Philadelphia regional office.

The official is William D. Waters, who was director of that Mr. Nixon had taken, the agency's district office in Baltimore last June when he 1973, that Mr. Waters wrote to wrote the letter of praise to the Nixons informed them that the President and Mrs. Nixon, following an audit by two agents in the Baltimore office Internal Revenue language. that had begun just seven days announced that it was conductare permitted to use, at their ing a re-examination" of the discretion. returns. The announcement The paragraph says, in part, Internal Revenue Service was came after questions had been "I want to compliment you on raised publicity about the the care shown in the prepara- ed bureaucracy. validity of some items the re-tion of your returns. turns contained, and after President Nixon had asked a Con-number of subjects during the dent Nixon had asked a Con-number of subjects during the According to Mr. Dean, Mr. gressional committee to look interview. Among them wtre Nixon replied that Democratic at all his returns since he be-the following: came President and to decide whether he owed more tax.

Donald C. Alexander, the

'A Fleeting Moment'

much-criticized audit of Mr. officials. This has been suggestwas "irrelevant to the consid-ministration, was "irrelevant to the consideration," Mr. Alexander said.

"Under questioning by reporters and editors of The New York Times at a luncheon interment who have access to individual tax returns, though he "may have considered for a did not specify which ones he fleeting moment" that the pro-would like to cut off.

"He would like to reduce the number of individuals and agention of ficials to use Internal Revenue to punish "enemies" of the Nixon Administration and concluded that I.R.S. had resisted these attempts.

"Mr. Alexander, formerly a did not specify which ones he fleeting moment" that the pro-would like to cut off. fleeting moment" that the promotion could look bad if Mr.

The hopes, but does not kno head of Internal Revenue by Nixon were subsequently found for sure, that the use of wireto have underpaid his taxes for taps and bugs by Internal Rev-sioner is the only political apthese years by hundreds of enue is decreasing. He has put pointee in Internal Revenue.

ing has been described as prob- than those of the Attorney Genable by some members of the eral on this matter, he said Congressional Joint Committee Wiretapping is mainly limittd

But, he continued, "if you nue suspects its agents are beare asking, 'Did I debate? Did ing bribed, he said. I worry?' the answer is 'no.'"

district office has been criti-ployes of Internal Revenue cized largely because the agents did not ask for documentation "The I.R.S. bu

arlier. tained a special second para-Internal Revenue has since graph that I.R.S. district offices

Mr. Alexander touched on a

Donald C. Alexander, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, defended the promotion of Mr. Waters, asserting that he was well qualified and would be a "damped good" that Internal Revenue the House posses and added that after the election, we should get peoretion of Mr. Waters, asserting dismissed White House counsel, White House requirements."

Internal Revenue the position of the white House posses and added that after the election, we should get peoretion of Mr. Waters, asserting dismissed White House counsel, White House requirements."

In praising the nonpartisan after the election, we should get peoretion of Mr. Waters, asserting dismissed White House counsel, White House requirements."

In praising the nonpartisan after the election, we should get peoretion of Mr. Waters, asserting dismissed White House counsel, White House requirements."

In praising the nonpartisan after the election, we should get peoretion of Mr. Waters, asserting dismissed White House counsel, White House requirements."

Mr. Waters's approval of the of the President and other high summer.

thousands of dollars. That find out some rules that are stricter on Internal Revenue Taxation, to cases where Internal Reve-

Mr. . Alexander · vigorously The audit in the Baltimore maintained that the career em-

"The I.R.S. bureaucracy is to support the large deductions that Mr. Nixon had taken.

The letter, dated June 1,

Mr. Dean testified before the Senate Watergate hearings that he had a conversation with President Nixon on Sept. 15. 1972 that included the subject In addition, the letter con-registed a special second page. enemies."

Mr. Dean said he had told the President that this would a rather Democratically orient-

Wanted 'Responsive' People

Administrations had used Inter-The disagrees with former nal Revenue for political pur-members of the White House poses and added that "after would be a "damned good" that Internal Revenue had been regionl administrator. There are seven I.R.S. regions in the nation.

"He sees no need to create some sort of independent agent to believe" that the standards of Internal Revenue had been standards of Internal Revenue st cy, not under White House au- were any different before he thority, to audit the tax returns arrived at the agency last

The Congressional Joint Com-Nixon's 1970 and 1971 returns ed by some students of tax ad-mittee looked into the attempts by various Nixon Administra-