

The White House Is Making Plans To Fight Back

Washington, D.C. (AP)—The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications, according to a source familiar with the situation. The source said that the White House is considering various options, including the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

A few days before it is reported to be a turning point in the Watergate case, the White House has a plan to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.

The White House is planning to fight back against the disclosure of its internal communications. The plan includes the possibility of suing the publisher of the information. The source also said that the White House is planning to issue a statement in the near future regarding the disclosure.