

SEP 11 1935

Who Is Sure He Has No Fever

It is a question that has been asked of the President of the United States many times. He has been asked it by the press, by the public, and by the members of his own family. The question is simple, but the answer is not so simple. The President has always answered it in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

Mr. Hoover, the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, has been asked this question many times. He has always answered it in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

The President has always answered this question in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

It is a question that has been asked of the President of the United States many times. He has been asked it by the press, by the public, and by the members of his own family. The question is simple, but the answer is not so simple. The President has always answered it in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

The President has always answered this question in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

It is a question that has been asked of the President of the United States many times. He has been asked it by the press, by the public, and by the members of his own family. The question is simple, but the answer is not so simple. The President has always answered it in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

The President has always answered this question in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

It is a question that has been asked of the President of the United States many times. He has been asked it by the press, by the public, and by the members of his own family. The question is simple, but the answer is not so simple. The President has always answered it in the same way. He has always said that he has no fever. But is he really sure?

United Press