Griffin, pursuing his penchant for historical references and connecting past statements with later actions, recalled a theme of Richard Nixon's 1968 campaign speeches, according to Griffin in these words:

"America is in trouble today not because our people have failed but because our leaders have failed. I do not say this to offend anyone but to warn by conviction and courage to the land to see to it that it is not this time that we must speak the truth and to..."

How do you have and want to know that between the time and I was... the President..."
