SAN CLEMENTE, Calif., July 8—President Nixon will speak in the Midwest for the second time in a month Monday when he flies to Kansas City for the swearing-in of Clarence M. Kelley as the new director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The choice of Kansas City rather than Washington for the ceremony will give the President an opportunity to test his popularity in a basically friendly area, much as he did last month when he flew to Pekin, Ill., to honor the late Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen.

Kelley is a native of Kansas City and was its police chief when Mr. Nixon nominated him for the post last month. He is a former FBI official.

The President's most recent speech before an unrestricted audience was June 15 in Pekin, where he dedicated a library in Dirksen's memory and received a warm welcome.

After the swearing-in ceremony in Kansas City, the President will return to Washington, ending a 16-day stay here that began when he brought Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev here for a weekend of talks.

The President will be returning to more of the Watergate controversy and for four meetings with foreign leaders scheduled to visit Washington this month.

Pakistan's president Zulfikar Ali Bhutto is scheduled to confer with the President July 17.

A week later, on July 24, the Shah of Iran will pay a state visit to Washington.

On July 30, the President will confer with Australia's Prime Minister Gough Whitlam, head of Australia's Labor Party and a sharp critic of Nixon policies in Indochina. Whitlam will stop in Washington en route to a Commonwealth prime minister's conference in Ottawa.

Finally, on July 31, Mr. Nixon will begin two days of meetings with Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka. They last met in Hawaii late in August, 1972.
