Angry reaction erupted on Capitol Hill yesterday to stepped-up U.S. bombing in Cambodia, with Sen. Walter F. Mondale (D-Minn.) denouncing it as "a double-cross of the Congress" by President Nixon that "blatantly violated the compromise agreed upon by the Congress and the President which ends all bombing ain Indochina by Aug. 15."

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, for its part, demanded a Pentagon explabing over the past few days and asked for details of daily sortie rates.

Prior to the Senate vote on the compromise provision, Scott's top aide called congressional liaison chief William Timmons and asked for guidance on the matter, it was learned yesterday.

The Kissinger aide went over word-for-word with Scott's aide a proposed statement outlining the assurances, which was then delivered by Fulbright on the floor. It read:

"The (foreign relations) committee offers this (Aug. 15 bombing cutoff compromise) amendment assuming that the interval between now and Aug. 15 will not be the occasion for an escalation of U.S. bombing in Cambodia or for its resumption anywhere else in Indochina unless provoked. As expressed by one member, the committee's view on this matter is that 'under this authority all efforts should be made consistent with the limited military objectives involved, to minimize damage to civilian life and property.' The committee's expectation in this matter has been communicated to the White House and assurances have been received in return that these guidelines are acceptable."

A minute later, Scott took the floor to confirm this, saying, "I have undertaken, as distinguished chairman the has noted, to secure assurances that there would be no escalation in the bombing during this intervening period, that great care would be taken to avoid damage to civilian persons and property. That point was raised by several members. We have received that assurance from the White House. I have revealed to the committee the persons with whom I have discussed it."
