Kissinger Replies to Kennedy

id Linked to Pact

Secretary of State Henry A. asinger says that the 1973 are agreement bringing a assertire to Vietnam committed the United States to aid but disturbing clarification" of Vietnam although "100 Kissinger as long to people are demonstrating in creasing self-reliance, we be asserted to Vietnam committed the United States to aid but Vietnam although "100 Kissinger as long to propound a new rationalization of Vietnam although "100 Kissinger as long to the United States to aid but disturbing clarification" of Vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy.

"I am disturbing clarification" of vietnamese government and U.S. policy. wists.

to give South Vietnam. The gees.

South Vietnam."

The Paris cease-fire agreement to self-determination. Kennedy responded to the Kissinger said that "we have Kissinger policy statement respectively. The United States, South Vietnam."

ment prepared at the request the Paris Agreement on End-Stating that the United of Sen Edward M Kennedy ing the War and Restoring States has invested "great hu (D-Mass.), chairman of the the Peace as creating new man and material resources" Senate Subcommittee on Refu. A merican commitments to thus committed ourselves very leased resterday on Capitol by the United States. South substantially, both politically Hill by calling it "a welcome See KENNEDY, A9, Col. 1 od the United States to aid as if is needed."

outh Vietnam although "no Kissinger explained U.S. Kennedy said. "Apparently illateral written commitment" policy on Indochina in a docu-

U.S. Aid to Saigon Is Linked to Pact

KENNEDY, From A1

Vietnam, North Vietnam and the Vietcong's Provisional Revolutionary Government.

Kissinger's policy statement criticizes North Vietnam for "serious" cease-fire violations. Although military casualties since the cease-fire have fallen to one-third the level before the agreement, Kissinger said. "it is unfortunately evident that significant violence continues to occur and that the cease-fire is far from being scrupulously observed."

North Vietnam, he continued, "has presisted" in infiltrating South Vietnam, sending more than 100,000 troops and "large quantities" of heavy equipment into the south.

Beyond this, Kissinger said in another section, North Vietnam has failed to live up to the agreement's terms on cessation of military activities in Cambodia and Laos, and accounting for U.S. missing in Kissinger declined to provide the dollar amounts of U.S. economic assistance in Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos for the current fiscal year and for the one to begin July 1. But Kennedy said that all U.S. spending in Indochina totals 3 billion for this fiscal year, a igure about $1 billion higher than official estimates, according to Dale S. de Haan, coun suade their now-intransigent sel to Kennedy's subcommit-

De Haan said that the Kissinger document, and several reports being prepared by the General Accounting Office, may provide the basis for holding subcommittee hearings sometime in the future.

He termed the Kissinger statement one of the most conprehensive on U.S. Indochina policy that Kissinger made in several months.

Kennedy sent Kissinger a list of nine questions March 13 and the Secretary of State, now on a honeymoon in Mexico, replied March 25.

South Vietnam, there are no formal commitments by the United States but national interest dictates U.S. support. Kissinger said.

Laos is "the bright spot in Indochina where the fruits of our efforts to assist and support the Royal Lao government are most clearly seen," Kissinger said. A cease-fire has endured for more than a year, he added, and "a coalition government may not be far away."

The "real progress" Kissinger described in Laos was made "partly because of our assistance."

However, the Secretary of State was less optimistic about peace prospects in Cambodia. He said a "broadened political base, a new prime minister and a more effective cabinet offer signs of improvements in the civil administration. The enormous dislocation of the war, destroying production, producing over a million refugees and encouraging spiraling inflation, face the leaders of the Khmer Republic with serious problems."

Nonetheless, Kissinger said, "we are convinced that with U.S. material and diplomatic support the Khmer Republic's demonstration of military and economic viability will peropponents to move to a political solution of the Cambodian conflict."

Talks on U.S. reconstruction aid to North Vietnam were suspended last July. Kissinger told Kennedy that the administration position is that the United States "cannot at this time move forward" on such a program.

Should North Vietnam stop military activities "demonstrate a serious compliance with the agreement," the United States would be prepared, with the approval of Congress, to proceed on the In Laos and Cambodia, as in program, Kissinger said.