

LADY OF DOUBT

Mr. Noyes' theory is that the facts of Jack's assassination have yet to be clarified. He does not follow in the footsteps of Mark Lane or Jim Garrison (he denounces Garrison as an incompetent and a crook), but pins his suspicions on a man with definite ties to organized crime, Eugene Hale Bradford, alias Jim Braden and other names. Bradford was mistaken in the police investigation for another (innocent) man named Eugene Eugene Bradley. Noyes has done exhaustive legwork and establishes firmly that Bradford was present at Dealey Plaza and that he has underworld ties; beyond that things get a little fuzzy. A last chapter linking in Robert Kennedy's death seems lame. A better-shaped, more readable book might win more supporters than this is likely to. [October]

THE HASIDIM: Mystical Adventures and Ecstasies. Ann L. Lowenkopf. Sherbourne Press, $2.50

"Springing up like mushrooms across the nation," Chabad houses provide young Jewish college students with a homey atmosphere in which to meet friends, worship God, and sing wordless Hasidic songs. Hasidism, their sect, was founded by a mid-18th century mystic, the Baal

Shem Tov or de hit, who taught plainly in the perfunctory of communications, and, consider if the discipline that was probed sincerely was better than a Talmudic scholar whose heart was cold. This historical introduction explains the basic tenets of the Hasid and his disciples, down to Menachem Mendel Schneerson, the seventh Lubavitcher rabbi, who studied science and engineering at the Sorbonne and runs a huge Hasidic center in Brooklyn. [October]

ASSIGNMENT: CEYLON.

Edward S. Aarons. Fawcett, 95c
This time, craggy Cajun superspy Sam Duret is in the Midwest, chasing a defecting diplomat, finding a beautiful Singapore politician, and being menaced by a self-proclaimed "messenger of evil," Dr. Mouquerana Sinn. There's also a rancid hippie, a bucolic Russian and a missing Buddhist relic. And when things get dull, someone usually comes through the door with a gun. In short, it's another neo-pulp concoction from the prolific Aarons, routine, but satisfying enough on its own modest terms. [October]

THE TEACHERS.

Susan Parrish. Ace, $1.25
Another fictional exposé from the Ace typing factory on how "career girls" run their lives. Not that these four girls are very career-minded: one moonlights as a prostitute, one works as a secretary and one spends her time like Mary Worth, meddling in the affairs of others. That leaves the gym teacher, who falls for her raider. Lead title, display dumps. [October]

AN EVERYDAY GUIDE TO YOUR HEALTH.

David Sobel and Faith Hornbacher. Grossman, $3.95; cloth $10
Health books are a big publishing fad this year, but this one is worth noting. Large, handsomely produced and embellished with lots of artwork, it gives more than the usual rundown on vitamins, nutrition, exercise, dental care and so forth, branching out into some explanation of acupuncture's "pressure points" with some practical application (reviewer-tested, fairly satisfactorily) to headaches and other minor worries. Quotations from Sufi tales and other sources dear to the counterculture pad the proceedings. Will definitely do best in paper. [October]

POSSESSED.

Hans Holzer. Fawcett, 95c
The indefatigable occultist here takes up the question of those who are or believe themselves to be possessed by spirits, pointing out that some cases of schizophrenia or murderous frenzy can be explained in this way. Humans, not devils, do the possessing, whether they are dead humans or living, says Holzer reassuringly. For the rest, the book is just one case history after another, quite tedious for any but a researcher. [November]

ELECTRIC LOVE.

Devon C. Johnson. Doubleday Press, $2.95
Mr. Johnson appears to be fascinated with "Electric Love" and "Electric Love." His theory is that the family that watches listens to inspirational music or services on radio or television is the family that gets saved together. Though this is a theory which has much appeal in this land of big-business gospel-sounding, Mr. Johnson's linear style of communication tends to be woolly rather than electrifying. [November]

LADY OF QUALITY.

Georgette Heyer. Bantam, $1.25
Miss Heyer's 14th novel in the 15th-century England, romantic, amusing and full of tart-tongued comment on the mores of the time. "P" also called it "delectable." [November]

AS ABOVE, SO BELOW.

Alan Oken. Bantam, $1.50
A thorough examination of the fore signs and planets from the mystical, scientific and philosophical points of view. It offers nothing fresh, however, and in the glutted astrological market Oken's ponderously wordy style will not help sales. [November]

KIDS WHO WENT TO ISRAEL.

Harold Flender. Washington Square Pocket Books, $1.25
A book of interviews with young people born elsewhere now living in Israel. Intermittently interesting—but the straight interview technique is repetitive and rather dull, as are the author's pushy introductions to most of his subjects. For the reader with patience can learn a good deal about modern Israel. [November]

SURVIVING THE CITY.

Edited by John Gabrie. Ballantine, $1.95
An anthology for professionals and students of urban planning with weighty articles (sometimes with footnotes and bibliography outdistancing content) mostly taken from professional journals of the 50s and 60s, and emphasizing behavioral science theory and methodology. Readers not familiar with the work of Buckminster Fuller, Paul Goodman and E. F. Hall are forewarned by the editor to stay away. Best selection: Christopher Alexander's "A City Is Not a Tree." [November]

SUSAN HOWARD: The Divine Bitch.

Doug McClelland. Pinnacle, $1.25
The red-haired actress from Brooklyn who never quite achieved the cult status of some of her peers, comes across as neither divine nor a bitch, but a hard worker who developed a fine talent in her rise from modest start to Oscar winner. The author calls this book a study of her career and freely admits to not having

ILLUMINATED WAY PRESS
P.O. Box 5325
Las Vegas, Nevada 89102

- Paul Twitchell
THE FLUTE OF GOD, 1971..... (plastic back) $4.95
- Paul Twitchell
THE SPIRITUAL NOTEBOOK 1971..... (plastic back) $5.95
- Paul Twitchell
THE FAR COUNTRY, 1971..... (paperback) $4.95
- Paul Twitchell
DIALOGUES WITH THE MASTER, 1970..... (paperback) $4.95
- Paul Twitchell
STRANGER BY THE RIVER, 1970..... (hardback) $5.95
- Paul Twitchell
COMING OF GOLD, 1972..... (hardback) $4.95
- Paul Twitchell
THE SHARIYAT-KI-SUGMAD, 1970..... (plastic cover) $6.00
- Paul Twitchell
THE TIGER'S FANG, 1967..... (paperback) $2.00
- Paul Twitchell
DRUMS OF ECK, 1970..... (paperback) $2.95
- Paul Twitchell
ANITA, 1969..... (hardback) $4.95
- Paul Twitchell
ALL ABOUT ECK, 1968..... (paperback) $2.00
- Paul Twitchell
INTRODUCTION TO ECKANKAR, 1966..... (paperback) $2.00
- Paul Twitchell
WAY OF DHARMA, 1970..... (paperback) $2.95
- Paul Twitchell
WISDOM OF ECK, 1972..... (plastic cover) $1.00
- Paul Twitchell
THE ICK-VIDYA—ANCIENT SCIENCE OF PROPHECY, 1972..... (hardback) $5.00
- Paul Twitchell
LETTERS TO GAIL, 1973..... (hardback) $6.00