Quality Translations for the Quality Publisher

THE MYSTERY OF TIME / Jean Mouroux / Desclée

"Those who enjoyed the author's earlier work... will be even more enthusiastic over this... John Drury's translation of it is magnificent."

—Cross And Crown, December 1934, 16:477

DISCOVERERS OF SPACE / Lessing et al. / Harder & Harder

"...the book is remarkably imaginative, handsome and informative in conveying the evolution of man's conception of space."

—Time, 5 December 1939, 94:109

THE THEOLOGY OF KARL BARTH / Hans Urs von Balthasar / Holt, Rinehart & Winston / Doubleday Anchor Books

"The translation is often lively though the subject matter is for advanced religion and philosophy students."

—Choice, September 1971, 8:848

"Since the German original appeared... our theological grammar and accents have shifted somewhat... Thus, for this English version the translator wisely decided upon an abridgement of the original work... The abridgement is generally successful... As an intelligent assessment, the work, which helped German Catholics appreciate Barth, will certainly serve us well."

—America, 10 July 1971, 126:15

LIVING OUR FUTURE: FRANCIS OF ASSISI AND THE CHURCH TODAY / Marie von Glin / Franciscan Herald Press / in collaboration with Marjorie Sullivan

"This is the 'sleeper' book of the year in the field of religious publications."

✓ AN AGENT ON THE OTHER SIDE
George O'Toole, McKay, $6.95

The author is a former CIA agent. In a note at the end of this, his first novel, he states that the 1968 historical events are true and that so is every reference to the work of the double agent, Col. Oleg Penkovsky. He also implies that some of the surprising methods employed by the CIA in his story are not entire fabrications. The Office of Special Research, set up to develop ways of using parapsychology in spying is, however, his own invention. Penkovsky's warnings about the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia are what the hero, John Sorel, maker of documentary films and unwilling dupe of CIA agent Cowles, finds himself up against. Led to a hidden farm in Virginia, site of the Agency's experiments in the occult, he is persuaded by what he sees there to go to Czechoslovakia to rescue from Soviet hands a friend, a famous film maker and also a medium in touch with Penkovsky. That's the background for a story of good suspense and undercover work in an espionage world that's never exactly what it seems to be. (October 24)

THE TIMES OF LONDON
ANTHOLOGY OF DETECTIVE STORIES
John Day, $6.95

These 10 stories were selected by Dame Agatha Christie, Lord Butler and Tom Stoppard from more than 1000 entries in a 1972 British detective story competition. Written in the whodunit tradition of Conan Doyle and Agatha Christie herself, they all exhibit neatness of style and plot and rely for their main effect on ingenious modulations of suspense and surprise, to which, rather than to more specifically literary qualities, they owe their excellence. The entry that won first prize, by an American, suggests the delicate craftsmanship of an expensive watch, but all the stories provide lively reading for the detective fiction buff. (October)
