Lane refused to identify the emissary, explaining:
"It is not for me to name them. It would be a breach of confidence with Garrison."
He has said that he was the only person, apart from those on Garrison's staff, who had seen the extensive evidence collected in New Orleans on the conspiracy.

Louis Ivon, an aide to Garrison, told The ENQUIRER when he was queried on the matter:
"Jim Garrison does not want to discuss this."
"He will not comment on Lane's statement or on the Robert Kennedy slaying."

The defense attorneys argued that the Warren Commission report that Oswald had the gun should be binding.
They also told the Federal Court it would be impossible to give Shaw a fair trial with an impartial jury because of the widespread publicity given the case.

A temporary injunction, stopping the trial, was granted by Federal Judge Frederick Heebe.

No date has yet been set for three judges to hear argument.
Garrison has ordered his assistants to give no information.
