Dear Dave,

In yesterday's mail with your 4/21, for which thanks, I got several letters in which Livingsstone refers to me as the chief or ringleader of those he imagines have conspired against him. One of his many references to me in those letters is to "Harold and his gangsters." I have the impression that he has some recognition of the fact that it will be High Trash 3 and I am more apprehensive about it.

From all I know you are correct in saying that as of 10/20/92 Harry was more interested in getting the dirt on those he had decided were 'cooking the evidence' than in reviewing the material" you had. He was already going farthur, imagining that his imagined critics conspiracy against him was a conspiracy to protect the imagined assassins. He actually ~~to~~ me that and I believe also wrote it.

Baltimore police Internal Affairs was investigating the propriety of policemen working with Harry. As of my last information it had not even interviewed Waybright. But they were not "looking into the methods of Livingsstone and his associates," a matter in which I only recently tried to interest it. The probability is that the detective who phoned the Welleses was Joe Adams. They were probably interested in whether Waybright identified himself as a Baltimore policeman when he was not there as such.

It is possible that some of Harry's references to "the problems he has had with others" fit very well with his identification of those "others," namely the four of us. If there is anything in them that can be taken as any kind of threat or menace or of his working with the police or as he actually wrote, ~~to~~ him ^{with} as the police, or to any alleged criminal violation by these others, it might be useful when I see the local prosecutor. The Maryland code makes it a felony to allege indicatble acts.

Harry's obvious diseases include paranoia and megalomania. He once told me that he had been treated for a mental problem. He attributed that to having been a blue baby ~~to~~ and to some vague malpractise about which I did not question him.

Thanks and our best,

Harold
