Dear Malcolm,

Some time before dawn yesterday I learned that the people I'd planned to see in Los Angeles would not be available the early part of next week. My earlier message of coming had not reached one.

Under these circumstances I'd have been laying around doing nothing in Los Angeles for a week. So I decided to return home and not waste a week.

This meant a very long day of much travelling. It has tired me more than it once would have.

On getting home I found an enormous quantity of records delivered as the result of a different court action.

As soon as I can inventory them for an accounting to the court and communicate this and what else is relevant to it to my lawyer I will write you further.

I'm sorry I had to abort the trip at its beginning. I'd have like to have spoken to you again about these matters based on what I've learned since we last spoke. Perhaps it may become possible in the future.

As I told you I did not expect that you would remember anything you had not recalled earlier. What you said earlier includes the information I would like to file with that court. In order to be able to do this as soon as possible I think I'll go over your testimony and my notes of our interviews, draft the information in affidavit form and send it to you to see if it conforms to your present recollection and otherwise meets with your approval.

I hope the need to change my plans does not inconvenience you in any way. I write in haste to let you know of the change because you are not now available by phone from the schedule you gave me several days ago.

Best wishes,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Harold:

It's always a pleasure to hear from you, and I'm glad to know that you're still continuing to work in that very difficult area. I really don't know how to respond to your letter inasmuch as I have no new information in regard to those tragic events of November 1963, and during the previous interview I told you everything that I knew. I had, as you might know, already seen the original autopsy reports. In addition I have a copy of the transcript of the press conferences, which was given to me by Mr. Hawks of the White House press department some years ago.

I am very impressed with the thoroughness of the scholarly efforts you have put into this particular endeavor, and I wish you all the success in the world in uncovering it. I am pleased to help you in any way that I can, and if it is convenient or indicated for you to call me or to write to me or to come and talk with me again, I'll be very happy to respond in any way I can, but you must know that I have no new information and the years have not sharpened my recall.

One small problem is that I'm not certain where I'll be over the coming year inasmuch as I'm looking at several other jobs, and it may well be that I will move sometime in the near future, although this is by no means certain. At any rate, I extend to you my best regards and I'll be pleased to help you in any way that I can.

Sincerely,

Malcolm O. Perry, M.D.
Professor of Surgery
