

Dear Gerald,

2/17/92

For when you return home. Sitting and thinking this morning after reading your acknowledgement in "Mengele," which I've decided to read now, when I can read, and having just responded to a letter from Bruce McKinney, who I'd helped with his doctoral thesis, I was reminded of a different kind of advantage from depositing your records at Hood College.

Bruce wrote me when he was an instructor at Penn State, where he was taking his doctorate. He told me he would not be able to remain in Frederick long because he could not afford to.

What he was working on had no connection with the college. Yet through it he got a place to stay for $25 a week!

There are people in town willing to take students in, renting a spare room to them for little.

Bruce was quite pleased with his room and the inexpensiveness of it made it possible for him to be here longer and do more work.

I have no doubt that similar arrangements can be made for those wanting to work on those 25,000 pages you have plus whatever you may have underlying the other books.

We enjoyed your visit and I did get all the packaging done.

Our best,

Gerald
