Gentlemen,

We have your Special Order LS 2919, for one copy of my POST MORTEM.

This book has been published in a xerox edition only. There are cases where we do sell copies of this edition, subject to certain restrictions until the book can be printed. However, there has been so much misuse of my material we feel it necessary to see to it that the book does not get into such hands and to obtain written agreement to the terms, which are that no use of any kind, direct or indirect, be made or permitted to be made, until the book is available in a printed edition. The date of that we cannot forecast.

So, although it is rather unusual, we would have to know who your customer is.

However, the price we have to charge may obviate all this. It is $20.00, to you, plus postage and insurance.

I am curious about your customer, for there are very few people who know about or have any way of knowing about this work.

In the event your customer is an institution, for example, where there is legitimate reason for them to have the work and a reasonable probability there will be no plagiarism, then there is also a second part to this work, titled, oddly, POST MORTEM III. The second part is not completed. The price is the same.

I enclose a list of our printed books on which we give normal trade discounts. You may want it for reference.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
