

Andre Chenier, the French poet, is reported to have said on his way to the guillotine, that there are "crimes so great that they make the laws themselves tremble."