

GOEHL, ADAMS & SCHUERING

ATTORNEYS AT LAW
506 VERMONT STREET
QUINCY, ILLINOIS
62301

RUSSELL R. GOEHL
JOHN F. ADAMS
DONALD R. SCHUERING
MARK A. SCHUERING
MARK A. CASSENS

TELEPHONES
AREA CODE 217
224-2555
224-2556

December 2, 1980

Mr. Harold Weisberg
RR #12
Old Receiver Road
Frederick, Maryland 21701

Re: People vs. John L. Ray

Dear Mr. Weisberg:

Please be advised that I am a public defender in Adams County who has been appointed as assistant counsel to represent Mr. John Larry Ray concerning the charge of bank robbery here in Adams County, Illinois.

Pursuant to that I am investigating any and all information and background related to the Rays in preparation for a trial which has tentatively scheduled over my objection to December 29, 1980.

It is for this reason that I am urgently making inquiries concerning background on Mr. Ray.

As you are probably aware the Freedom of Information Act as well as newspaper articles and the like can provide a wealth of information.

It has been suggested to me that in fact you might lend a hand and direct copies or documents concerning John Larry Ray or related matters to this office.

As you might suspect being a public defender our budgets are severely restricted and we have already been denied the use of an investigator. Despite that certain reasonable and limited expenses I can incur such as postage, mailing expenses, photocopying and the like.

If you could be of any assistance and direct certain materials to this office, it would appreciated. If you have any questions and would like to call me collect, please do so at the above number or my home telephone number which is 217-224-0093.

GOEHL, ADAMS & SCHUERING

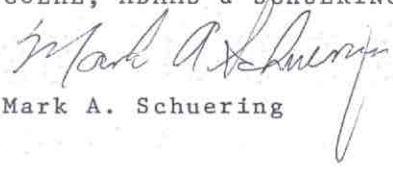

Mr. Harold Weisberg
Page Two
December 2, 1980

I have provided an information release concerning John Larry Ray which directs that information concerning him may be released directly to me as his attorney directed to this office by registered mail and in fact we will pay the cost of any and all postage or upon the payment direct payment to the party delivering the same.

If there is anything further you might need, please do not hesitate to call. Thank you for your assistance if able to provide it.

Very truly yours,

GOEHL, ADAMS & SCHUERING

Mark A. Schuering

MAS:jw

INFORMATION RELEASE

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

You are hereby authorized to give to Mark A. Schuering, my attorney, any information concerning information provided pursuant to the United States Code Title V, Section 552, et al commonly known as the Freedom of Information Act and or any other information which I may be entitled to by any and all applicable Federal and State Statutes. The information should be provided directly to my attorney, Mark A. Schuering, at 506 Vermont St., in Quincy, Illinois and for further information concerning the arrangements for the deliver of such information and/or payment of postage and photocoping said attorney should be contacted at the following telephone number the same may be made by collect telephone call at his office 217-224-2555 or at his residence 217-224-0093.

Any privilege I may have to said information is hereby waived to my said attorney solely and subject to our attorney-client privilege.

Send by Registered Mail to Mr. Mark A. Schuering, Attorney at Law, 506 Vermont St., Quincy, IL 62301.

JOHN L. RAY

John L. Ray

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 3rd day of December, 1980.

Joan Weeks

the dismissal of Dr. Alizaduh is reversed with directions that process should issue against him.

Affirmed in part and reversed in part and remanded to the district court with directions.

David RYAN, Appellant,

v.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE, Appellee.

No. 78-1040.

United States Court of Appeals,
Fourth Circuit.

Argued Dec. 7, 1978.

Decided April 2, 1979.

FBI employee brought action under the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act to gain the access to a memorandum concerning him, and also sought damages for wilful disclosure of the contents of the document. The United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia, Albert V. Bryan, Jr., J., denied relief and FBI employee appealed. The Court of Appeals, Field, Senior Circuit Judge, held that: (1) the memorandum in question was properly exempted from the disclosure provisions of the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act, but (2) the system of records in which the document was contained had not been properly exempted from the civil remedies provisions of the Privacy Act for wrongful disclosure.

Affirmed in part and reversed and remanded in part.

Gamble's medical needs by means of interference with the prison doctor's performance or

1. Records ⇄60

Justice Department memoranda which dealt with the removal, insulation, reassignment, or other curtailment of official actions which FBI documents classification officer had taken with respect to an investigation of alleged surreptitious entries by certain FBI agents was exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act as a record compiled for law enforcement purposes which was part of an ongoing criminal investigation. 5 U.S.C.A. § 552(b)(7).

2. Records ⇄57

To properly exempt a system of records from an individual's right of disclosure under the Privacy Act, an agency must promulgate rules which exempt a system of records from a provision of the Act and state the reasons, in the rule itself, as to why the system of records is to be exempt from a provision of the Act. 5 U.S.C.A. § 552a(j).

3. Records ⇄31

Since Justice Department had promulgated rules exempting system of records which included the record being sought by the FBI employee from disclosure under the Privacy Act and since the reason for withholding the memorandum was consistent with one of the reasons listed for exempting the system of records, the memorandum was exempt from the application of the access provisions of the Privacy Act. 5 U.S.C.A. § 552a(a, d, j).

4. Records ⇄55

Since Justice Department had exempted a particular system of records from the application of the access provisions of the Privacy Act, there was no need for the civil remedies provisions to enforce the access provisions with respect to that system of records and the Department of Justice adequately explained its reason for so exempting the system of records from that part of the civil remedies provisions by referring to the fact that the system of records was exempt from the access provisions. 5 U.S.C.A. § 552a(d, g).

in any other manner which would satisfy the Supreme Court standard."

5. Records ⇄

Although have exempted term of record civil remedies for a wrongful failed to do exemption with requirement that stated in the records. 5 U.S.

Alan E. Wol Solerwitz, Min appellant.

Elsie L. Mun andria, Va. (W Atty., Alexand lee.

Before HAYI FIELD, Senior LIPS, Circuit Ju

FIELD, Senior

David Ryan ha of the district judgment in fav Department of Ju by Ryan under th Act (FOIA), 5 U.S Act, 5 U.S.C. § 5 certain memorane well as damages f ful disclosure of t ment to a third pu

Ryan is employe fication Officer (S Federal Bureau of ginning January 6 requests of the Jus ant to the FOIA a the production of de in his official cap appellant requested July 8, 1976, memor:

1. The appellant has n memorandum and ca contents. Both the d have examined the J in camera.

Records ¶ 55

Although Department of Justice could have exempted its JUSTICE/CRT-001 system of records from the application of the civil remedies provisions of the Privacy Act for a wrongful disclosure violation, it had failed to do so and could not claim the exemption without first satisfying the requirement that the reasons therefore be stated in the rule exempting the system of records. 5 U.S.C.A. § 552a(b, g, j).

Alan E. Wolin, Mineola, N. Y. (Jack B. Solerwitz, Mineola, N. Y., on brief), for appellant.

Elsie L. Munsell, Asst. U. S. Atty., Alexandria, Va. (William B. Cummings, U. S. Atty., Alexandria, Va., on brief), for appellee.

Before HAYNSWORTH, Chief Judge, FIELD, Senior Circuit Judge, and PHILLIPS, Circuit Judge.

FIELD, Senior Circuit Judge:

David Ryan has appealed from an order of the district court awarding summary judgment in favor of the United States Department of Justice in an action brought by Ryan under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, and the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, to obtain access to a certain memorandum concerning him, as well as damages for the Department's wilful disclosure of the contents of the document to a third party.

Ryan is employed as a Documents' Classification Officer (Security Officer) with the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). Beginning January 6, 1977, he made several requests of the Justice Department pursuant to the FOIA and the Privacy Act for the production of documents relating to him in his official capacity. Specifically, the appellant requested the production of a July 8, 1976, memorandum which he alleged was in the files of the Justice Department. Ryan contends that the July 8, 1976, memorandum dealt with the removal, insulation, reassignment or other curtailment of official actions he had taken with respect to an investigation of alleged surreptitious entries by certain FBI agents.¹ Although the appellant was provided with a copy of another related memorandum which referred to him in his official capacity, the Justice Department denied him access to the July 8, 1976, memorandum on the basis that it was exempt from the mandatory disclosure provisions of the FOIA under § 552(b)(5) and (b)(7)(A) and that there were no records properly available to him under the terms of the Privacy Act.²

On August 9, 1977, subsequent to the commencement of the original action, an article appearing in the Washington Post reported that Quinlan J. Shea, Jr., a Justice Department attorney, "characterized the July 8 memo as saying Ryan was 'getting in the way' of the investigators." Ryan then filed an amended complaint which, in addition to his previous claim, alleged that the Justice Department, in violation of the Privacy Act, had wrongfully disclosed to the Washington Post information relating to him and that he was entitled to damages under the Act for the wrongful disclosure.

The district court concluded that the memorandum was exempt from disclosure to the plaintiff under § 552(b)(7) (FOIA) and under § 552a(j) (Privacy Act) as implemented by Justice Department regulations promulgated pursuant to § 552a(j). In addition, it held that the memorandum could not reasonably be segregated into exempt and nonexempt parts. Finally, the court held that § 552a(j), together with the Justice Department regulations, deprived Ryan of any of the civil remedies found in § 552a(g), thus leaving him without an action for relief for the alleged wrongful disclosure of the contents of the memorandum.

1. The appellant has never seen the July 8, 1976, memorandum and can only speculate as to its contents. Both the district court and this court have examined the July 8, 1976, memorandum in camera.

2. The appellee admitted that the July 8, 1976, memorandum existed and that it dealt with the appellant in his official capacity.

The district court entered summary judgment in favor of the Justice Department on Ryan's request for disclosure of the memorandum as well as his claim for relief for wrongful disclosure of the contents of the memorandum to the Washington Post.

Disposition of this appeal requires our consideration of the concededly convoluted structure and relationship between the two Acts. Both the Freedom of Information Act and the Privacy Act contain provisions under which a party may gain access to records maintained by agencies of the United States. The FOIA contemplates access to any and all records not exempt from disclosure. The Privacy Act provides for access by an individual to records maintained concerning him. Underlying the FOIA is a broad policy of release, while the Privacy Act limits access and is designed to protect the privacy of individual citizens. Both Acts, however, contain provisions which exempt documents from access under certain specified circumstances.

Disclosure to the Appellant

[1] Subsection 552(a) sets forth the disclosure provisions of the FOIA, and the appellant specifically relies on § 552(a)(3) which requires that each agency make available to the public any records for which there has been a request made in accordance with published rules relative to the procedures to be followed. Subsection

3. After listing the nine exemptions from the § 552(a) disclosure provisions, § 552(b) provides in part:

Any reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection.

4. Subsection 552a(d) provides in part:

(d) Access to records.—Each agency that maintains a system of records shall—

(1) upon request by any individual to gain access to his record or to any information pertaining to him which is contained in the system, permit him and upon his request, a person of his own choosing to accompany him, to review the record and have a copy made of all or any portion thereof in a form comprehensible to him, except that the agency may require the individual to furnish a written statement authorizing discussion of

552(b), however, lists nine specific exemptions from the general disclosure provisions of the FOIA. Subsection 552(b)(7) exempts from disclosure "investigatory records compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such records would (A) interfere with enforcement proceedings * * *." Based upon our examination of the memorandum of July 8, 1976, we agree with the conclusion of the district court that it was exempt from disclosure under § 552(b)(7) of the FOIA as a record "compiled for law enforcement purposes" which was part of an ongoing criminal investigation. We further agree that the memorandum was not capable of being reasonably segregated into exempt and nonexempt parts as provided by § 552(b).³

[2, 3] We also are of the opinion that the request for access under the Privacy Act was properly denied. Subsection 552a(d) of the Privacy Act permits an individual to gain access to those records which pertain to him and are found in a system of records maintained by an agency.⁴ Subsection 552a(j)(2), however, provides for exemption from the application of § 552a(d), among other sections, any system of records which is "maintained by an agency or component thereof which performs as its principal function any activity pertaining to the enforcement of criminal laws * * * and which consists of * * * (B) information that individual's record in the accompanying person's presence;

The term "record" is defined in subsection 552a(a)(4) as:

* * * any item, collection, or grouping of information about an individual that is maintained by an agency, including, but not limited to, his education, financial transactions, medical history, and criminal or employment history and that contains his name, or the identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual, such as a finger or voice print or a photograph. The term "system of records" is defined in subsection 552a(a)(5) as:

* * * a group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particular assigned to the individual;

compiled for the purpose of a criminal investigation, including reports of informants and investigators, and associated with an identifiable individual * * *⁵ To properly exempt a system of records, an agency must: (1) promulgate rules, pursuant to the rule making requirements of § 553(b)(1), (2), and (3), (c) and (e), which exempt a system of records from a provision of the Act, and (2) state the reasons in the rule itself why the system of records is to be exempt from a provision of the Act. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(j). The Justice Department takes the position that because it has promulgated certain regulations found in 28 C.F.R. § 16.90(e) and (f), the memorandum sought by Ryan is exempt from the access provisions of the Privacy Act. Specifically, § 16.90(e) exempts from the § 552a(d) access provisions a system of records designated as "Central Civil Rights Division Index File and Associated Record (JUSTICE/CRT-001)" of which system of records the memorandum is a part. Subsection 16.90(f)(1) refers to the reasons for exempting JUSTICE/CRT-001 from § 552a(d): " * * * because freely permitting access to records in this system would compromise ongoing investigations and reveal investigatory techniques." Since the Justice Department has promulgated rules exempting the system of records which includes the July 8, 1976, memorandum and the reason for withholding the memorandum is consistent with one of the reasons listed in the regulations for exempting JUSTICE/CRT-001 from the application of the access provisions, the district court properly concluded that § 552a(j) and 28 C.F.R. § 16.90(e) and (f) combine to exempt the memorandum from the applica-

5. The Justice Department is clearly an agency which performs as its principal function an activity pertaining to the enforcement of criminal laws, and Ryan has not contended that the system of records of which the July 8, 1976, memorandum is a part is not information compiled for the purpose of a criminal investigation.

6. The appellant has argued that documents to which access has been requested under the Privacy Act should be subject to the same requirement applicable to the FOIA under tion of the access provisions of the Privacy Act.⁶

Wrongful Disclosure to a Third Party

Subsection 552a(g) provides civil remedies which are available to an individual whose rights under the Privacy Act have been violated by an agency. Ryan seeks damages under the civil remedies provisions of § 552a(g)(4) for the alleged wrongful disclosure of the contents of the July 8, 1976, memorandum by the Justice Department to the Washington Post. As heretofore noted, subsection 552a(j) permits an agency whose primary function is the enforcement of criminal laws to exempt a system of records which is compiled for the purpose of a criminal investigation from the application of the civil remedies provisions by (1) promulgating rules which specifically exempt a system of records from § 552a(g) and (2) stating the reasons for the exemption in the rule itself.⁷ The Justice Department contends that the system of records of which the memorandum is a part is properly exempt from the application of the civil remedies provisions by the promulgation of 28 C.F.R. § 16.90(e) and (f).

[4] The Department has satisfied the first requirement for exempting the memorandum by promulgating 28 C.F.R. § 16.90(e) which reads in part: "The following system of records is exempt from 5 U.S.C. 552a(c)(3), (d) and (g): (1) Central Civil Rights Division Index File and Associated Records (JUSTICE/CRT-001)." In an effort to comply with the requirement that reasons for the exemption be stated in the rule, the Department has promulgated 28 C.F.R. § 16.90(f) which reads in part: "Exceptions from the particular subsections are § 552(b) of segregating exempt from non-exempt parts of a document but has cited no provision in the Privacy Act to support such a position. We need not determine whether a requirement of segregation exists under the Privacy Act since we conclude that even if such a requirement exists, the July 8, 1976, memorandum cannot reasonably be segregated into exempt and nonexempt parts.

7. See text accompanying note 5.

justified for the following reasons: * * * (2) From subsection (g) [(civil remedies provisions)] because exemption from the provision of subsection (d) [(access provisions)] will render the provisions on suits to enforce (d) inapplicable." Since the Justice Department has exempted JUSTICE/CRT-001 from the application of the § 552a(d) access provisions, there is no need for the § 552a(g) civil remedies provisions to enforce that subsection, and the Department has adequately explained its reason for so exempting the system of records from that part of the civil remedies provisions. But while the Justice Department had the authority to completely exempt JUSTICE/CRT-001 from the application of all of the civil remedies, it did so only to the extent that those provisions would have applied to enforce access under § 552a(d).

It should be noted that the Office of Management and Budget which has been given the responsibility of developing guidelines and regulations for the use of agencies in implementing the Privacy Act, and of providing continuing assistance to and oversight of the implementation of the Privacy Act by such agencies,⁸ made this comment about the exemption provisions of the Act: "It should be emphasized that the exemption provisions are permissive; i. e., an agency head is authorized, but not required, to exempt a system from all or any portion of selected provisions of the Act when he or she deems it to be in the best interest of the Government and consistent with the Act and these guidelines." 40 Fed.Reg. 28971 (1975). By requiring the agency to state the reasons in the rule itself for exempting a system of records from a provision of the Privacy Act, the extent of the exemption intended can be fully ascertained.⁹

[5] Although the Justice Department could have exempted JUSTICE/CRT-001

8. Privacy Act of 1974, Pub.L.No. 93-579, § 6, 88 Stat. 1896 (1974).

9. The requirement of § 552a(j) that an agency state the reasons for exempting a system of records from a provision of the Privacy Act is in addition to the § 553(c) requirement that from the application of the § 552a(g) civil remedies provisions to a § 552a(b) wrongful disclosure violation, it failed to do so as required by § 552a(j) and cannot now claim such an exemption without first satisfying the requirement that reasons therefor be stated in the rule. Since the Department did not take the steps necessary to exempt JUSTICE/CRT-001 from the civil remedy for wrongful disclosure, it was error to grant summary judgment against the plaintiff on his charge of improper disclosure of the July 8, 1976, memorandum to the Washington Post. We, of course, express no opinion on the merits of the plaintiff's claim.

The judgment denying disclosure and access under Count 1 is affirmed; the judgment dismissing the claim for damages under Count 2 is reversed, and the case remanded for further proceedings.

In re UNITED STEELWORKERS OF AMERICA, AFL-CIO-CLC, Petitioner.

No. 79-1190.

United States Court of Appeals,
Fourth Circuit.

Submitted March 16, 1979.

Decided April 10, 1979.

Union sought writ of mandamus directing that district court vacate order requiring another union which had lost representation election be accorded full party status at unfair labor practice hearing being con-after considering matter presented by persons who are interested in the rule making, the agency shall incorporate in the rules adopted a concise general statement of their basis and purpose.