

Judge Lets Foreign Defendants Exaggerate for Indemnification

A judge in a federal court in New York has granted foreign defendants the right to exaggerate their financial resources in order to obtain indemnification for the costs of their defense. The judge, Judge Sherman, was one of the first to grant such a request. Among the requests denied by Judge Sherman was one that the defendants should be allowed to exaggerate their financial resources in order to obtain indemnification for the costs of their defense. The judge said that the government has a duty to prosecute the case and that the defendants have a duty to defend themselves. He said that the government has a duty to provide the defendants with the resources they need to defend themselves. He said that the government has a duty to provide the defendants with the resources they need to defend themselves. He said that the government has a duty to provide the defendants with the resources they need to defend themselves.

...ent
...now the
...all co-
...involved in the al-
...any overt acts not
...included in the indictments.
...alleged
...types of vehicles
...by some of the defend-
...and the names and ad-
...of the Selective Service
...allegedly plotted

...ent
...upheld
...the gov-
...of the
...allegedly conspired
...to see and possess
...unregistered firearms