Dear Mr. Weisberg,

Since I never received a letter to the contrary, I assume that you did receive my money order for the Whitewash books. If by some chance you didn't, please let me know because I do have the money order receipts.

As I said in my last letter, I'd really like to get a copy of Oswald in New Orleans; also, I haven't been able to find a copy of Frame-Up anywhere. If you still have any copies of the Oswald book and Frame-Up, I'd really appreciate it if you would send them to me, and upon receiving them I'll send you a money order to cover the price of the books and the postage.

The Whitewash books were fantastic; I had a waiting list of family and friends who wanted to read them. I can understand now why you couldn't get anyone to publish them. It's really a shame, because books like that should be available to everyone in any book store. I know that the Oswald and the Frame-Up books will be as informative and controversial as those were, so I'm looking forward to reading them. Thanks for all your help.

Sincerely yours,
Karen Sable
