Formerly Secret Data Call Oswald Poor Shot

NEW YORK, March 23 (UPI) — Formerly classified transcripts of closed Warren Commission sessions disclosed today that Lee Harvey Oswald was such "an extremely poor shot" during his stay in Russia in 1959 that hunting companions had to give him game.

The Commission received this information from Yuri Ivanovich Nosenko, a Russian secret police agent who defected to the United States three months after the 1963 assassination of President Kennedy, according to an article by David Wise in the current issue of Saturday Evening Post.

Transcripts of 11 closed commission sessions were declassified for Wise's inspection in line with the National Archives policy of continuing declassification.

Wise said the titles of a still classified document—"Lee Harvey Oswald's Access to Classified Information About the U.S."—indicated he may have given the Russians secret information on that reconnaissance plane. He probably had a chance to observe unique takeoff and landing procedures of the plane at the U.S. Naval Air Base in Atsugi, Japan, when he was a Marine Corps radar operator in 1957-59, the article said.

The declassified transcripts also disclosed that Chief Justice Earl Warren, head of the Commission, and other members considered evidence concerning the bullets that hit the President as "totally inconclusive." They showed that the Commission tried and failed to inspect Kennedy autopsy photographs, which were in the possession of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

Another memorandum still classified as secret indicates by its title that the CIA knew of Oswald's visit to the Russian Embassy in Mexico City on Sept. 28, 1963, two months before the assassination and had alerted the FBI and other agencies on Oct. 10.
