

4/13/92

Dear David,

Saulsbury

Among other things in which there was mere passing reference to it Harry told me that Rick had been suspended. He at least pretended not to know the reason because he asked me to find out for him. I told him I had no means he did not have. I've heard nothing from him since. He begins his tour with the new book a week from today.

I fear it is what I feared and said I feared when I first met both of you. I hope it does not include you.

Throughout the book Harry boasts of his help from Rick, clearly identified as a Baltimore policeman and amazingly, as "my chief investigator."

This at least implied there was more than one.

I enclose the special section of the local paper on the Keys, who open at home tonight.

Hope they do well with a virtually entirely new team.

I don't be listening to the game because I've discovered that - have "sleep apnea." Rather it was discovered in tests.

I slept until a little after midnight last night/this morning, first night in five in which I slept as late as midnight.

So, I try to be abed not much after seven.

Hope we see you all soon.

Our best to you all,

Harold