

5/17/69

Dear Gary,

It is getting toward the end of a long and tiring day (too many are now this kind) and I want to answer your 5/15 so my mind can be free for what I must do as fast as possible for John Nichols.

Ron Hobbs was here today. I went to the airport and got him, then took him back. He was going to rent a car but I thought he was imposing on himself that way. His, however, meant four sixty-mile trips in addition to all the other things. I like him. I'll let you know what, if anything, develops.

Thanks for the slides. Because there is no chance I'll be needing them right away I've offered to lend them to Bernabei, who is now examining them to see if he'll want to use in some of his speeches. He has been examining the pictures and finds interesting things. He is quite sharp on these things. He is not yet certain of their meaning. (shell)

The Lifton stuff is Lifton, who cannot conceive anything is right but what he wants, that what he doesn't believe isn't. Here I cannot fault Mark, who must also know that dealing with Dave is futility. He was polite and just brushed him off. Dave knows nothing but he likes KF. However, he deceives in his Heindell representations. It is he who deceived JG, he who elicited and sent the false affidavits against Heindell. He forgets he acknowledged this in "Open City". He has no idea what I think of KF and makes up what he says. As you already know, I have neither knowledge of or interest in Garrison's charge but have entirely different interests, and you know what some, at least, are. However, the date Lifton gives is important. I also was in LA then. I had just been in N.C. I had gone to see KF's friend Bolton, warned him that if Garrison knew what I did his interest in KF was inevitable, and I offered to talk to KF because I was of the opinion he might possess fact the significance of which was lost on him. I went further and assured the literary property would be his. I have a notion Dave has had much less to say since I was in Calif and spoke to him, on Paul's urging.

I am neither angry nor surprised at the Fred vilification. He is nuts. I told you they all are and you will eventually see whether this is an exaggeration. So far as my making advances are concerned, no one ever believed a man's denial, but for the record, I make it. What else can I say? I think I know what is behind it and if it is important to you, we can discuss it when we are together. However, there is a kind of answer available to you. You read my file of correspondence with him, as I have offered before. You will find no reference to any such thing, even when at the end he got nasty, and you will find the kind of letters entirely inconsistent with this for a period of about a year after I was there. I think this is adequate answer. I'd like you to read that file, for there are other things you'll learn. Let me take the other things up in the order of your letter.

My alleged taking Lillian's research and claiming it as my own, etc. This probably does not relate to Willis 5/2202 but to the 206-12 but. Here is the story on that: I spotted it in Liebel's questioning of X, marked it and entirely forgot it when I wrote WW. When Sylvia read it she called this oversight to my attention. Then I realized what I had done, checked the volume and there is the red mark I made when I first read it. However, I wrote Sylvia and thanked her and told her I'd add it and give her credit. She replied saying Lillian had told her of it. I wrote Lillian and told her I'd give her credit and she replied saying she never wanted credit for anything, that she was afraid, etc. I have all these letters. And you can also see my Volume 7. On the Willis 5, there is one thing Lillian told me I had not noted. I think that was Clint Hill's shoulder, etc. I reached my conclusions by entirely different means, as my writing, which is explicit, shows, and used other proofs, not those she did. However, when I found that either her attitude had changed or that in any event, if she had anything to fear it was too late when someone did bring her into it, I went out of my way, I think in PM, to give her elaborate credit, really out of context, but to record it. You can see for yourself her repeated complaints to me that no one would use her work, for which she wanted no mention, including Earl Warren, Mark Lane and many others. And some of it is pretty wild stuff. More, when Garrison used my stuff on the sewers and when he was writing a press release, I asked him to note that the concept of the use of the sewers in the assassination originated with her and you'll find it in that press release, despite the fact that she had nothing to do with what he said and used and had no knowledge of any of it. It was stuff I got at the Archives and what Al Chapman did for me (and JG misused entirely). I never saw any of Lillian's stuff anywhere, Sylvia never showed me any of anybody's work. This is all fabrication, whether or not Lillian said it to begin with. As a matter of fact, it is I who gave Lillian all the utilities blueprints for Dealey Plaza, before and after it was built, had a hell of a time getting them back, and never did get acknowledgement that she had even received them. On this same aspect, I also have Ray "Arcus" work on Z and did not use it. I can show you the letters I wrote him begging him to use my stuff in his awkward, dull, incomplete monograph and I did not use his important Conally stuff because I felt he should, it was that important. Again, this is all in writing. More, as you have seen, during the Thompson hassle you know the letters I wrote on Ray's behalf and his weird reaction. I know Hal read them.

There is no question what happened at Recede, or of Lifton's role in it (I presume he was Fred's source). That, too, is largely in writing and Lifton has yet to deny what I wrote him about this (which you can also see). He made it up and it is the opposite of fact. Now as to Liebelser refusing to face me, it is fact and recorded. The day after we taped the Les Crane show he refused to confront me live on KJL-TV, the Stan Bohrman Show, when Bohrman phoned him. And on my insistence this was then aired. Fred must know it. I readily acknowledge my debate with him was not one of my better nights, and for my losing my cool there is really no excuse. But I know of no one who thinks Liebelser "wiped the floor" with me, and I know Liebelser has been 100% silent since that night. And I do mean 100%. He admitted the Aktgens picture was doctored in every form in which it was used, among other things, and there was the most abundant airing of that picture as I got and used it and as he did, etc. I asked for an immediate taping of a second show when they corrupted the format after we were on the air (late because Liebelser almost didn't show). It is not I who didn't go through with this. So far as Lane's ability to "handle" Liebelser is concerned, my first trip to Calif in December 1966 was to get Liebelser off Lane's back, at Maggie and Bill O'Connell's repeated request. He had Lane on the ropes and they were all hurting. I got none of my expenses back, no help, not a single cent, on transportation. Hal's people were to have paid it and to this day have come up with only a small part, and that of only my fare to SF, nothing else. I have the Lane-Liebelser tape. Epstein was on it. He did much better than Mark, and it is this that prompted Bill and Maggie to ask me to go there. I abandoned WWII to do this and what a cost that was! And was it exhausting! Hal could not keep up with what I did in SF alone.

Interesting that Bradley is a "CIA executioner" and Jaffe an "agent".

I never phoned Maggie and asked her for $200 to continue my investigations. When Vince made his famous deal for me and it was not lived up to, and I had to leave because I had no money, I phoned her and Vince and told them both. My purpose, and it is explicit to Maggie at least and in writing, was so there would never be any recrimination that I had run out on the other critics when they were depending on me, etc. What she said was very embarrassing, about all the money she had spent, etc., and had no intentions of spending another cent. She said she'd speak to her husband to see if he felt they could afford it (!) I told her and Vince when I was leaving and I did leave then. Bud was there and he was in the same position they are. As you know, I preferred not to be there for the trial for there was a better way to spend the time. And this had nothing to do with my investigations but was for the trial.

Do I have to tell you how ridiculous his filth about sitting waiting for the mail in Jim's office is? Or what this says of Fred?

I repeat, it is not anger I feel but a kind of sickness. In one way or another you have personal knowledge of much of this.

What Fred says of JG now is not at all what he was writing me, as you should also see for yourself. At the very best he is a sick man, and that is the very best. But when you see what he is now doing, what do you think of the original advice I gave you, to stay away from him? And I renew my cautions about the undependability of his work. But on the credit hogging about which he says so much, when you get a chance reread his stuff as I saw it in the three issues of "Probs" and see for yourself who used who's stuff without credit!

It is also futile to try anything with Marlynn. Do you expect her to disavow him or to prove him a liar, evil or nuts. The best thing you can do is drop it where it is. He will misuse anything you write him.

Do you honestly think he'll pay attention to constructive criticism? This is an enormous waste of time from which only evil can flow. And it wastes so much time for so many.

I did not know Bud was leaving. I've heard nothing from him and I've made no effort to get in touch with him.

May I also suggest that with what you have now seen of Fred, can any of his work be used at all? Can a man be so irrational and dishonest on some affairs and dependable in others?

I disagree with you on the end of your third paragraph. I think we should leave the nuts strictly alone once we are satisfied they are nuts. They cannot be saved, they can be depended upon to do some harm, and the time can be put to better use in any event. You cannot cure sickness by waving holy water and you cannot straighten out a sick mind that doesn't want to be any other way. All these people have heavy guilt hanging on them and they cannot abide it. With JG, with Lamarre, etc. By the way, there has been no response on I from Maggie, nothing on DeV. I sent you what I wrote. Each of those sycophants had a major share in the N.O. ruin and each knows it. I think perhaps this in part explains this sudden campaign against me. I warned them on both, well in advance.

There is no point in your confronting Fred on this for it will be meaningless and accomplish nothing. Drop it, but satisfy yourself when you are here, or, if you feel you cannot, ask for copies of whatever you want and I'll stop and make them for you. All I care about is that in your own mind you end satisfied.

I am too tired for any more, want to spend some time with Dick and it is bedtime (he leaves in the a.m.), and I do not think I'll louse up the prospects of getting any work done tomorrow by reading and correcting. If there is anything unclear, let me know.

I do hope you can find some way of relieving your financial problems. But above all, do not let them get you down. Best,

Dear Harold,

Well, this years bad luck has finally been capped off by a coup de gras. Yesterday I got a hospital bill from last summer for $611. I had been assured, although not officially that the bill had been taken care of, since I saved a guy's life during a civil disturbance and actually did the job the police were afraid to do, etc. I will be working like crazy to find a way of getting some organization or agency to pick up the tab. Naturally, I have little money (not to mention a $1200 debt) plus the fact that the money I have in the bank was to go for my support this summer since I have no support as of now.

Enclosed are some slides which may interest you. Thanks for sending me the materials to make the 544 Camp slides. The ~~###~~ mug shots of the woman are of Rose Cherami. The rest you should recognize.

Fred is really getting out of hand. Although, as you know, I feel that your condemnatic of him is excessive, there are a number of things about him we agree on. His critical attitude towards you I don't agree with either, and I am getting more and more upset about comments he makes during tense periods. I am very concerned about getting him calmed down and working on the photo evidence. True, he is working hard on the Z film now, but he is really saying some crazy things in letters and continually misconstruing and misperceiving things I write him. He is incredibly sensative to criticism to the point of paranoia about it, in that playing the devil's advocate to his work causes him to get very anxious and disturbed. In any event, here are some things in his last letter which concern you. Please treat them as totally confidential and when you make any comments about them in future letters, try to think in terms of things which happened which could have been misconstrued or seen through colored lenses, etc. We have got to start analyzing these failures of logic and misperceptions or nobody will talk to anybody soon:

The reason that Lillian won't send things to Weisberg is because he has taken her research and claimed that it was his. I saw him do this on TV here another time. He always claims that he discovered something first, or that someone stole his research. For instance, Lillia developed Willis #5/Z202 and sent it to Sylvia. Harold saw this research at Sylvia's, and changed it enough so he could call it his and included it in his book. He has admitted to Lillian that he did this, according to Lillian. And I'll take Lillian's word any day over Harold Weisberg's.

Harold's (sic) unethical and has a history of this, including stating that Leibler backed out of a debate with him. Can you imagine Leibler being afraid to debate Harold? I saw Leibler wipe the floor with Harold on TV here. I'm not saying Leibler had the best arguments, all I'm saying is that Leibler is a better debater than Harold. Lane can handle Leibler in a debate and it's a good match to see them. (I have.)

Harold lived here with me for a week so don't tell me I don't know him. Harold's idea of how to show his appreciation for my putting him up in my house was to make passes at my wife. Bradley (CIA executioner that he is) and Jaffe (agent that he is) would never dream of doing this. Marlynn finally (sic) asked me to take her along whenever I left the house, and told me why. Harold has bad manners.

Harold called Maggie and said that if she didn't send $200 for him for living expenses so that  he could continue his investigation, Jim's case would be lost. Now, I would rather die than do this. Not Harold though.. Maggie thinks Harold has bad manners too!

Harold has a camp stool set up right next to the mail box and probably is the first to greet the postman in Jim's office, "Hi Hank, what ya got in the old mail sack today for us?"

By now, Harold, you are probably raging with anger, but don't, if for no other reason than it isn't worth it. I only communicate these things to you with hesitation, and a bit of faith that you will understand them for what they are. Fred's whole letter consisted largely (5 pages worth) of raving about me and my failures which is even sicker in many respects, because just months ago I was the only person he said he could trust in the critic community. Logic and reason are lost on him. After raving about how the critics spread gossip about Bradley, Lifton, and Thornley and how Ray spreads it about him, he goes and does the same things in spades. These particular complaints were a bit too far out of hand for myself, as a close friend of yours, to take just as a clinical psychologist. I wrote a lengthy and stiff reply, but was in too upset a state of mind to remember to make a carbon for you. I had hoped that Marlynn, with whom I have good rapport, would help keep him in line, but from his claim that she said you made passes at her, something I find quite hard to believe, I don't know. Believe it or not, Dave Lifton is far more stable and more reliable than Fred, and his attitudes on a number of things have mellowed after long discussions and arguments with me, so that perhaps now he can help a bit to calm Fred down. By the way, I assume that you will be getting a copy of the Z film sometime soon, since I got mine today yesterday. Despite Fred's ravings about the violation of people's rights and Garrison's irresponsibility, he failed to confront Lane when he saw Mark on the West Coast, although he knows that Lane is the central figure in Garrison's bad ways. Unless I get some sort of a reasonable answer to my most recent letter, I don't expect that I could tolerate much more correspondence with him, despite the fact that one of us should be in touch with what he is doing and try to keep him in line and criticize his work.

A recent letter from Bud indicates that he is going on a 5 week swing through the South and southwest. Sprague apparently sent Fred an outline of a manuscript he is preparing. He claims to be looking for a publisher. Fred was finally asked to join the CTIA and turned it down, saying that they had been irresponsible publicly, like in claiming links between the assassinations.

The rest of the items are self-explanatory. I have written Gibbons for more details of the Bolden stuff.

Best wishes to you and your wife. I am emotionally and physically exhausted.
