

passenger and freight operations had experienced more growth dur-ing the 1960s and early 1970s than Southern Air transport.

Froni

That srowth — the tiem had been tather small in 1960 when the CIA bought it outright for $300,000 from its founder, F.C. (Doc) Moor, and Williams, Moor's second-in-command — was also aided through millions of dollars in credit made avail-able through other CIA-owned companies.

Williams, however, argues that other, truly private supple-mental airlines — nonscheduled

Turn to Page 12A Col. 1

companie

He also defends the purchase price ("I tried and pressed to get the very best purchase I could do, Wouldn't you? Isn't that the best way to do business?") and says that everything was done legally.

WHILE THERE is some specula-tion that the agency may have de-cided it could get more money sellcided it could get more money sell-ing it to Williams than it could by putting Southern Air Transport on the open market or simply dissolv-ing the company and selling off its assets. The Herald has been unable to find any appraisals reflecting this. this.

The agency would not have been bound to sell Southern Air Trans-port to a higher bidder anyway, since legislation creating the CIA gave the director of Central Intelligence a freer hand in handling fi-nances than any other bureaucrat in Washington. (The House Government Operations Committee did in-quire about the sale in a letter to the Civil Aeronautics Board, asking whether it was counter to govern-ment procedure for disposing of surplus property. The CIA respond-ed — with a letter marked "classi-fied.")

Williams did not get quite as good a deal as he had wanted, or as the CIA had planned to give him, even after the price was settled on: the original plan was for him to buy the company outright and con-tinue to operate it as a globe-span-ning common carrier.

WHEN THE AIRLINE'S competiwhen the AIRLINE'S competi-tors complained — saying Southern Air Transport had grown through illegal government subsidies — the company surrendered its status as a certificated airline. That took it out from under the CAB jurisdiction and allowed the CIA to sell it how-ever it pleased, without further hearings. hearings.

The charge of status reduced the value of the firm somewhat, but not devastatingly so. It can still fly wherever it wants, so long as it's doing so on a contract basis. When asked whether he would resail Southern Air Transport today for $4.5 million, Williams replied, "No."

The maneuver allowed the CIA to The maneuver allowed the CIA to preserve what was left of the rather tattered veil of secrecy surrounding its network of airlines by disposing of the firm quietly. However, by late 1973, a number of the air pro-pretaries had been publicly identi-fied. Essentially all that was left unknown were the details of the fi-nancial arrangements and of the missions assigned to the airlines.

AGENCY OFFICIALS decline to discuss these details.

Public records and interviews with persons connected with South-ern Air Transport, however, do re-veal how the agency acted in the fi-nancial affairs of that airline:

After purchasing the company in 1960, it simply installed a group of titular stockholders and directors

Southern Air Transport Airfreighter at Miami International in 1971

Firm's Sale to 'Front' reserver one per may of shere war

ramer tran-homideent Ownership-reporting requirements of the CAB apparently were treated with what competitors complained was "little more than disdam." One instance cited was the way in which Southern Air Transport reacquired — apparently without reporting the transaction - 20 per cent of the company which it swapped in 1966 for the $1.1 million in assets of another firm. Forcum Air Transport Development, those assets included two arreplanes. planes

FROM PAGE 1

 Beginning in 1960, the CIA began timenting the expansion of the autime by having its principal atrine proprietary. Are America, sell Southern Air Transport two De6's, each worth $865,000, entirely, on credit Subsequently. Air America would lend the airline and its holding company. Actus Technology Inc., more thin $16,7 million Additionally, the Pacific Corp., a CitA-owned holding continues $6,66 million from the Manufacture's Hamoyer Truss Co. (Lames Basshen, Southern Air Transport's attorney clause that some of the Jones were merely renewals of carlier, notes. They are listed individually, herewere, in a summary field with the CAB.) Southern Air Transport attorney would subscience the Air Cransport and the Additional Additio • What profits it earned, Snuth-ern Air Transport kept, even though two of the directors say they thought the money was passed to the government. "We made seve and million adding to eral million dollars for Uncle Sam," erai minion doiars for Uncle San, ' Said one, proudly. Williams, howev-er, says, "There wasn't any divi-dend paid that I know of, as you and I would think of it if we were stockholders." By the time Williams ngreed to purchase the airline, its books showed $2,821,588.24 in "ietained carnings."

tained carnings." The liction that Southern Air Transport was privately owned was continued even throughout the imi-tial stages of the CAB hearings into Williams' proposal to acquire control of it, the stages which oc-curred before Southern Air Trans-port's attorney, Bastien, convinced the CAB to order the hearings closed to the public and to swear all participants to secrecy.

EXHIBITS SUBMITTED in the case include financial strements which showed Williams as owning a third of Southern Air Transport and the holding company. Williams' holdings were valued at $1,442,000. Moor, however, until his death in September, 1972, had been listed in CAB documents as owning, in his own behalf, a quarter of the autime and the holding company. Yet his state, according to probate court records, amounted to roughly $200,000 --- with no mention of any stock in the abline. Recently, Williams and the other stock in the airline. Recently, Williams and the other two director stockholders — Perci-val Flack Brundage and L. Perkins McGuite, respectively the director of the Bureau of the Budget and an assistant secretary of defense dur-ing the Elsenbower Albumarcanon — have all acknowledged in matri-views that they were only nonneces and did not actually own the air-

Anong Southern Air Transports

Group." Among Southern Air Transport's commercial clients was the Chile an government of President Salva dor Allends, Before Allende va toppled in a ClA-connected compriss Department of Astronuture hire i Southern Air Transport to five in heet from Mendoza, Argentina - As far as 1 knew, all we ever flew was meat, says Williams. Others, however, have attributed

<text><text><text><text><text><text>