Dear Mike,

I'm glad to get the picture of the honor society. Please thank them for me, those you will yet see, who have not graduated. I do appreciate it, very much. When Dave Wrene's son made it, I looked for my pin, which dates to the late 1920s, to give him, and could not find it. Made of silver in those days.

Do appreciate the "book marks" but do not need them, happily. But thanks.

No news on the book. Please do not ask me when. I've wasted much time on that in recent years and I have no knowledge of it. Which does not make me happier.

I've never stopped to think that ^W but I suppose that one answer to your question, that have I learned since publishing Post Mortem that was most surprising is the openness in the records I got under FOIA of not investigating the crime itself.

The same question of the period of the 1960s and early 1970s, the Commission's determination not to investigate the crime itself and its knuckling under to J. Edgar Hoover's pressures on it.

Thanks and best wishes,
