

Short Ends

L.A. Cris Pia, Far those whe thick the Reddr's film revieways acually have experiting here are our protest approximation of the second term of the second second second second term of the second second second second reviews, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term proteins, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term reviews, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term reviews, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term reviews, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term reviews, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term reviews, we gree high marks as UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term for ficial Learner forms field. Here could be stand that the Advanced Here could be stand. The Fabres for UAPCX insteams for the Advanced term insteams for the Advanced term Here could be the Advanced term for the Reds of the Long, Best Constant (2000 for the Advanced term Presistion from the Advanced term Presistion from the Advanced term for the Reds of the Long, Best Dealed Lidy of the Long, Best Deale Lidy of the Long, Best Deale Lidy of the Long for the Advanced terms for the Reds of the Long, Stander Deale Lidy of the Long term Press and Element for the New Generation Advanced the New Generation Advanced term Press and Element Bernstain. Only when it came is the Best Generation advanced to the New Generation advanced to the Stander Press and Element Bernstain. Only when it came is the Best Generation advanced to the Stander Here advanced term terms and the term and the term terms and the term and the term terms and the term and the term terms and the terms and the terms and the term term terms and the terms and the terms and terms and the terms and the terms and terms and the terms and the terms and terms and terms and the terms and terms and terms and the terms and terms and terms and terms to the terms

De Hend Paliz. Newidad, A special premiers of La Paramér (The Sephedr, Tody will be hed Sauraty at 2 J par. at the Ispan America Theatan, 244 5. San Henry St. The Lable to the Ispan America the Ispan America New Sectors (Sectors 1) henry to the America America henry to the America America henry to the America America henry to the Amer

Los Angeles READER December 30, 1991 27

No. 10.00

Kevin Costner in JFK

Gall Stone

'JFK' Is an In-Your-Face, Three-Hour Spellbinder

IF JFK, DIBECTED BY OLATE STIDER. SCHEDNLAF BY OLATER STORE & ZACIAAR SALAE, BARD ON THE BOOKS ON THE TABL OF THE ASSASSED BY JON ADDRESS AND CROSSING: THE TAOT THAT KALLO KRANADE BY JON MADE, WITH KEYS CONTING, TOMAY LEE DORS, GARY OLDAN, DO FERS, DORAD SUTHERLAND, KAND BOOK, JY, O'S SANTER, MICHAEN, RONKER, SBAN DOLYA-MUMARY, LAURAM MITCLAT, JON: LAUNON, ET ADRES, JON CONTINUE (GARDION (AME) CENTURY, STOPELY CONDUCTION, HOLLYYOOD GALAY, GRADE, PLAZ, MANG'E WESTWOODI, CRITERON, MARSENTLACE, COSPLEX UNIVERSAL)

By Andy Klein

With the possible exception of Spike Lee, Oliver Stone is Hollywood's most in-your-face film maker. He wants to coax us into his moral universe, but, if coaxing doesn't work, he is more than willing to knock us down and lecture us. You have to applaud him for taking on important subjects that no one else with clout wants to handle, and you have to applaud louder on the occasions when he does it well.

n the other hand, there is something scary about his messianic arrogance. Most arriss want to impose their interpretation of the world on the audience; among them, film makers have to be the pushiest merely to survive professionally in such a high-stakes business. It is a truism that you would rather have a director who makes bad decisions than one who makes no decisions at all.

sions at all. A child of the upper class, Stone may have converted from the right to the left, but he could never be called a liberal. In some ways, he is reminiscent of the most macho elements of the sixties left. — so convinced of the urgency of his particular vision that he barrels on ahead at times when a little more reflection might be called for.

This is not an entrefy negative quality. The liberal intellect has the dangerous potential to bleach all shades of morality into indistinguishable grays. Stone, in invoked Hamlet, Western culture's leading icon of Action vs. Moral Insecurity, characterizing the boomer generation as "children of a slain leader, unaware of why he was killed or even that a false father figure inhabits the throne." JFR is clearly intended to remind us

JFK is clearly intended to remind us that the ghost still walls the battlements, that our culture will be forever haunted if we give up the quest for the ruth about the central trauma of the postwar ern or, worse yee, if we willingly, greedily opt to delude ourselves by accepting the most implausible "official" scenario. Stone is not always the most mubic of artista heck, let's face it, more than once he has been the lear subile of artista heck, let's face it, more than once he has been the lear subile of artista — but the problems of approaching such a massive and controversial story require complex technique and moral passion more than art. On that level, Stone succeds: JFK is a wildly compelling piece of agitprop docudarama.

For the sake of dramatic structure, Stone hangs his arguments on the story of Jim Garrison, the New Orleans D.A. who froated the only assassination-related criminal processuion ever to go to trial. He incorporates much additional information that has been dug up in the twenty-odd years since Garrison's original work. He structures the material as a legal detective story, with the D.A. uncovering detective atory, with the D.A. uncovering detecter and deeper layers of conspiracy, coverup, and political meaning. No critic can neuralize his or her own

No critic can neuralize his or her own social and political attitudes when approaching even the most abstract or aestheticized work — nor would it be a particularly good thing to do so. In the case of JFK, however, it is particularly rough to talk about the film as film art; all arguments veer quickly from the aes-thetic to the political, based on one's own basic take on the Kennedy assassi-nation, the U. S. government, and human nature in general. Which may well be exactly what Stone most wants.

CARDING MADE

READER'S GUIDE CINEMA

he director packs a huge amount of material into a running time of slightly more than three hours. Three hours may sound forbiddingly long — I'm sure it does to theater owners — but the fascination never flags. Stone uses a lot of shorthand devices to compress the material and create drama — combining char-acters and attributing other people's insights and actions to Garrison. (In interviews. Stone has been open about taking such license. Still, the film itself could have used a stronger disclaimer, and, impractical as it may sound, Warner probably should have sprung for footnoted supplemental material in the theater lobby.)

This necessary translation also is the basis for the most legitimate criti-cisms that have already been leveled at Stone. Those who object to the film's central ideological thesis --- that the United States was subjected in 1963 to a secret coup d'etat, whose beneficiaries may still be in power can use the details of the film's choices to cast doubt on its analysis. Most troublesome is the use of Garrison. Who can say whether he was (or is) an earnest crusader or a wife-beat-ing, ambitious homophobe with psychotic delusions of grandeur? - the latter being just a few of the charges lev-eled against him at the time by either legitimate critics or government smear specialists, depending, once again, on which side you are inclined to believe.

Stone idealizes Garrison into an unreal figure - Mr. D.A. Goes to Washington. Casting Kevin Costner at this stage of his career — no more No Way Out for K. C., no Ivan the Deep Cover Spy — automatically defines Garrison as the Good American. Stone himself says he wanted Costner because the latter has that James Stewart-Gary Cooper quality that made them perfect Capra heroes. Even within the film he deliberately invokes Capra, both in a scene at the Lincoln Memorial and in Garrison's long, final summation (which was actually delivered by someone else).

> he closest to a flaw Stone will allow his hero is obsessiveness: His pursuit of the truth threatens to destroy his family. Not surprisingly, the domestic scenes are by far the film's worst moments - cliched, flat, unnecessary token baggage. Out side of Born on the Fourth of July, Stone, whose main shtick is dramatizing (and thus simplifying) ideological argument, has never been strong on family interaction. The only such relationship that rings true in film after film is the alienated son trying to resolve his conflicts with real or symbolic dada. As a result, JFK squa an actress of the talent of Sissy Spacek (as Garrison's wife) in a part that would have been better off cut out altogether.

Stone has an affinity for Good Father vs. Bad Father conflicts. In Pla-toon, it was most blatant, Wall Street even had three father figures - good Martin Sheen, bad Michael Douglas, and Stone's tribute to his own real dad, Hal Holbrook. It's perhaps a sign that the director still hasn't settled his filial feelings that Holbrook is the worst delineated, most cardboard character in any of his films - a homily-dispensing Way ing Ward Cleaver clone. In JFK, this schema for presenting moral questions reaches its purest, most algebraically abstract distillation: The Good Father is X (Donald Sutherland), the Bad Father Y (Dale Dye). Y is a shadowy figure who embodies the bad guys in Stone's analrsis; X is the same on the surface but mbued with moral passion.

There is another way to analyze the White Hars vs. the Black Hats in JFK, however, one that makes you wish Stone had chosen a story other than Garrison's (or that he had recast it with fictional personas): Gurrison, the straight all-American suburbanite, vs. Clay Shaw (Tommy Lee Jones), the effete, decadent homosexual conspirator. Too much energy is likely to be expended denouncing the portrayal of Shaw and the film's relentlessly evil gays. While it would be nice to know whether Shaw was guilty or not — the film presents flashbacks from Shaw's point of view that absolutely indict him, while the real evidence has con-3rd incredible month!

Pacific's Liberwood Center To (210) 634-9281 ULLTRA-STRASS

W MEMBERS DOA WILA, HEP Your I

(310) (25-1506

tinued to be ambiguous --- it's a shame that Stone has given his detractors this sort of detail to focus debate on. It makes it easier for them to ignore or dismiss the more important points of his case.

here the film succeeds best Is in the debunking of the Warren Commission Report. There are numerous ways to artnek this bogus palliative of an offi-cial report but Stone wisely homes in on its strongest flaws — the blatantly impossible mechanics of the official story — rather than its infinite number of improbabilities.

Costner is appropriately flat as Gar-rison. The cast is studded with too many celebrity actors: Most of them perform well but the film almost sinks into the Greatest Story Ever Told syn-drome — look, there's John Wayne as the Centurion swabbing Garrison's wounds. John Candy does a terrific turn as a sleazy hipster lawyer but you can't forget that he is John Candy. Joe Pesci has the most memorable role, as the weird, hyperkinetic informer David Ferrie, and plays it to the max. Donald Sutherland is almost as memorable in his far less exploitable part.

It is amusing to watch the sarcasm with which JFK has already been dismissed in some corners of the main-stream press — are these criticisms valid skepticism or more disinformation? The public debate is already dizzying, which opens up the possibility that JFK will only end up falling victim to the "Winter Kills syndrome" and serving the very villains it tries to expose. In Richard Condon's novel Winter Kills, by far the greatest fictional treatment of the assa sination, the conspirators know that it is impossible to keep secret a plot involving dozens of peo nie. The only way to hide the truth is to disseminate so many conflicting rumors and explanations that the truth is indistinguishable among them: Investigations will eventually peter out through sheer exhaustion.

FK briefly brings some degree of clarity to this great, shrouded mystery. Whether intentionally or the debate it has already engendered may only serve to muddy things again. The horrifying thing about the Winter Kills scenario is that it may truly be impossible to combat.

To Lie in Madrid

HIGH HERLS, WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY PEDRO ALMODOWN, MURIC BY ROUGH SAKANOTO WITH VICTORIA ARKE, MARKA PARDISE, MIGUEL BOSE, AND PRODOR ATADNE. (GOLDWYN PAWILDN POR AFRT, TOWN & COANTRO!

By Andy Klein

Pedro Almodóvar continues to be the most inventive director to arrive on American shores from the thaw of post-Franco Spain. His biggest commercial successes, the frantically inventive comedy Women on the Verge of a Nervous Breakdown and the less inspired Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down!, displayed a weird synthesis of passion and ironic pop campiness.

dotter in the second of the mother's former lovers. (Victoria Abril) waiting to greet her mother at the suddenly shifts gears and the Madrid airport. A series of sardonic fiashbacks fill us in on their relationship. Mom is Becky Del Paramo (Marisa Paredes), a vastly popular entertainer whose romantic relationships and career priorities have made her a neglectful parent. When Rebecca was ten or eleven, she more or less mur-dered her asshole stepfather, in hopes of winning more of her mother's time, naught riter ten anner tutes over her upbringing and Becky disappears for fifteen years of international touring. Now Becky is returning to Madrid. Rebecca is still obsessed with gaining she has tried to recreate her mother's world within her own life: Not only does she hang out with a female impersonator who mimics Becky's act bur she has also married Manuel, one

About a third of the way in, the story suddenly shifts gears and the movie swerves from apparent black comedy to weepie melodrama. The rest of the story is like an ironic conflation of a dozen Fannie Hurst novels and Douelas Sirk films, with insane plot rever sals and an orgy of noble self-sacrifice. Abril is at her best here, heartbreak-ingly sympathetic but a little scary as well. Her transition from stylish prosional to lost waif toward the end is strikingly moving.

No one ever diacovers the crime, but Rebecca's naughtiness was for naught: Her real father takes over her

