● FBI boss threw wild orgies with boys, dressed in drag & demanded
to be called Mary

LEGENDARY crime-buster J. Edgar Hoover was a kinky homosexual who secretly dolled himself up in drag for orgies with teenage boys — and a top mob kingpin had the damning pictures to prove it!

"Early in his career, Hoover was trapped by his own gayness," reveals investigative author Anthony Summers.

"Mafia boss Meyer Lansky, who specialized in using damaging information to manipulate men in public life, got his hands on the compromising evidence and used it to blackmail him."

In his explosive biography, Official and Confidential: The Secret Life of J. Edgar Hoover, Summers also rips the lid off Hoover's steamy affair with Associate FBI Director Clyde Tolson.

Other sources reveal that Lansky and Mafia honcho Frank Costello carefully collected photographs of Hoover strolling in drag with Tolson and having sex with him — which Lansky kept safe under lock and key in his Florida home until he died.

The mobsters used the shocking snapshots to blackmail Hoover into turning a blind eye to organized crime that earned them billions.

The chubby little FBI czar was so terrified of exposure, he even claimed the Mafia didn't exist!

Summers discloses that Susan Rosenstiel, widow of liquor magnate Lewis Rosenstiel, was flabbergasted when she met Hoover at a swish sex party hosted by flamboyant gay lawyer Roy Cohn at New York's Plaza Hotel.

"He was wearing a fluffy black dress with flounces, lace stockings, high heels and a black curly wig," she says.

"He had makeup on and false eyelashes. The dress was very short, and he was sitting there in the living room of the suite with his legs crossed.

"Roy introduced him to me as Mary and he replied: 'Good evening.'

"It was obvious he wasn't a woman — you could see where he shaved. It was J. Edgar Hoover.

"You've never seen anything like it. I couldn't believe it, that I should see the head of the FBI dressed as a woman!"

A short time later, a pair of young blond teenagers showed up at the posh suite.

"Roy made a signal that we should go into the bedroom," Susan says. "It was tremendous, with a bed like in Caesar's time. We went in and Hoover took off his lace dress. Under the dress he was wearing a little garter belt.

"He lay down on the double bed and the two boys worked on him with their hands. One of them wore rubber gloves. They wanted a woman there watching. I guess it gave them an extra thrill."

Susan ran into the nation's top cop at another private sex party about a year later.

"He had a red dress on and a black feather boa around his neck," she reveals.

"He was dressed like an old flapper.

"After about half an hour some boys came, like before. But this time they were dressed in leather.

"Hoover had a Bible, and he wanted one of the boys to read from it while the other boy played with him, wearing rubber gloves.

"Then Hoover grabbed the Bible, threw it down, and told the second boy to join in the sex."

Luisa Stuart, a top fashion model in the 1930s, has also come forward to expose the sordid truth about the kinky FBI director — which she discovered when she rode in his limo to a New Year's Eve party at one of New York's famous clubs.

"I sat in back with my boyfriend Art," she recalls.

"Hoover and Tolson sat opposite us in those two little seats on hinges they have in limousines.

"That's when I noticed they were holding hands — all the way to the club. Just sitting there talking and holding hands with each other."

Summer says that before he finally died in office at the age of 77, Hoover consulted several top shrinks in a desperate bid to "cure" him of his gay passions.

Monteen Ruffin, wife of noted psychiatrist Marshall de G. Ruffin, confides that the feared FBI chief was tortured to the end.

"It's all in my husband's notes," she says. "Everybody understood he was a homosexual, not just the doctors."
